WOMAN KILLED, TWO ARE HELD IN AUTO CRASH

Liquor Charges Booked After Fatal Wreck Near Fairfax.

VICTIM RESIDENT OF CAPITAL CITY

Roadster Turns Over as It Passes Truck on Road.

POLICE CLAIM RUM WAS FOUND IN CAR

Matron, With Two Male Companions, Was on Way to Leesburg.

Mrs. Gladys Starr, 25 years old, of a second-floor apartment on B street near First street southwest, was killed early yesterday morning when the roadster she was driving with two companions crashed on the Lee-Jackson highway, about 2 miles west of Fairfax, Va.

Her jugular vein severed and her head badly crushed, Mrs. Starr failed to regain consciousness and died a few minutes later beside the wrecked machine.

Thomas J. Van Pelt, 21 years old, a steamfitter, of Cheverly, Md., and owner of the car, was dazed, but escaped injury, while the other member of the party, James H. Colbert, 23 years old, a barbecue stand attendant, of D street, near Sixth street northwest, suffered inconsequential bruises on the right side.

Both Men Under Arrest.

Both men were taken in custody by Fairfax County authorities on charges of violating the State prohibition law and lodged in the Fairfax Jail after members of the sheriff's force reported seizing two pints of liquor in the machine.

Dr. C. A. Ransom, coroner of Fairfax County, in an immediate inquest rendered a verdict that the woman met accidental death. Both men denied that they knew any liquor was in the machine, although testimony indicated that the woman had taken "a couple of drinks" during the night.

The party started at midnight and ended with the crash six hours later, they testified. Colbert, identifying himself as an attendant at Tom's barbecue stand at Cottage City, Md., said he and Mrs. Starr, a frequent visitor there, decided to make a trip to Leesburg, Va., to see a "girl friend" of the woman. Van Pelt, a customer at the stand, was persuaded to accompany them in his machine.

Stopped at Apartment.

En route to Leesburg, where they had planned that Van Pelt should have a date with the other girl, they stopped at Mrs. Starr's apartment for about fifteen minutes and then headed toward Leesburg. Questioning failed to reveal where they had been in the meantime.

The accident occurred just after Mrs. Starr, at the wheel, had passed a large milk truck proceeding toward Washington. The roadster swerved far into the broad right-of-way on the right-hand side of the road, and in being brought back to the highway shot across to the extreme left side of the highway, plowed down a 4-foot rail fence, overturned and then righted itself.

The three occupants were hurled clear of the wreckage. Van Pelt recovered first and reached the woman as she was dying, he said. Passing motorists summoned police.

George Crist, of Liberty avenue, Baltimore, was notified. Police said he would take charge of the body at Groff's undertaking home in Fairfax.

Mercantile Collections Improve.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Collections of wholesale and manufacturing firms throughout the country are at least 6 per cent better than they were a month ago, the November bulletin of the National Association of Credit Men says.

Buyers Kept Coming

"ONCE upon a time" is a good start in fiction. But for the best start in facts, "NOW is the time"—if you have something to sell. Mr. Horace K. Dickson, 504 Dahlia Street N. W., Takoma Park, had an Essex Coach he wanted to sell—for cash. He ran an ad in The Post. The car was sold. And, though the ad stopped, the replies did not.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

This Republic need fear little internal danger if the people conscientiously discharge their duty to vote. All abuses that may arise will be redressed by that constitutional method. We can secure a government of the bad by the good and avoid a government of the good by the bad only through a general expression of the qualified voters.

We have plenty of unthinking people, some vicious, and others organized for selfish exploitation of the public through governmental agencies. All of these elements vote in full force. In a light vote they will be the decisive factor.

The great body of our people are thoughtful, serious, unselfish and patriotic. They are not easily deceived because they contemplate both the future and the past. Demagogues and false issues do not move them. They have wisdom. They are judges of men. The Republic is safe when they vote.

Both the voters and public officers may be confused by complicated governmental questions. But the voters are not confused about candidates. They know a sham from a reality. The country needs the judgment of every enlightened voter on November fourth.

C. & O. CANAL YIELDS BODY OF WOMAN, 38

Death in Rowboat Accident Calls Attention to Lack of Bridge at Spot.

PURSE FOUND IN CRAFT

Gruesomely vindicating repeated requests for a bridge in the vicinity, the body of Mrs. Hattie Peacock yesterday was taken from the C. & O. Canal, into which she fell Saturday night while attempting to cross in a rowboat the only means of passage available to several families living across from the 4500 block of Canal road. She was 38 years old.

Mrs. Peacock left the home of her father, Lach Eaton, about 5:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon, with the expressed intention of visiting her son at the Wise Brothers Dairy. Entering a rowboat at a landing in front of her home opposite 4500 Canal road, she crossed safely to the other side. Her father next saw her at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, when her body was found floating in the canal by William P. Reynolds and W. A. Finley, of 3400 K street northwest.

Her purse was on the seat of the rowboat, which was discovered about three-quarters of a mile from the Eaton landing, and the presence of a bag of groceries in the water near the wharf convinced authorities that she had fallen between the boat and the landing when she attempted to return to her home about 9 o'clock last night.

Fred E. Rest, 17 years old, and his sister, Eleanor, who used the boat jointly with the Eaton family, were unable to find the craft when they attempted to return to their home from a party about 2 o'clock yesterday. Walking down the bank they found the boat about a half mile from the landing, drifting on the canal. They found Mrs. Peacock's purse on the seat, but went to bed immediately after crossing, thinking that the woman had merely forgotten to tie the boat after using it.

Early yesterday morning, when they discovered that Mrs. Peacock had not been seen all night, they notified Reynolds and Finley, who have a contract to remove bodies from the stream.

The woman's body was found floating on the surface, about a half mile above the Eaton landing. The canal is 20 feet deep and about 50 feet wide.

Authorities and the Eaton family were convinced that she had accidentally drowned, as she was said to have been in excellent spirits and was planning a trip to Norfolk, Va., to-

40 MEN IMPERILED AS SHIP ASKS HELP

RUDDER REPORTED LOST

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Wallowing helplessly in heavy north Pacific seas, the Japanese freighter Seiyo Maru sent out frantic messages late today in an effort to make a rescue ship understand her position.

The freighter, carrying a crew of about 40 men, wirelessed she had lost her rudder, was listing dangerously and in a sinking condition.

The steamship California was trying to go to the aid of the helpless craft in the stormy waters southwest of the Aleutian Islands. Radio messages received by the Dollar Steamship Co. radio station at Mussel Rock indicated the rescue ship was having difficulty understanding the distress calls of the Japanese vessel.

"I can't make you understand English," the radio operator aboard the Seiyo Maru told the California, the Dollar station reported.

"At 3:35 p. m. (Pacific standard time) the California was reported 35 miles away from the distressed ship after plowing through the seas for several hours in search of the freighter.

First word of the Seiyo Maru's plight was received here through the President Grant, when the Japanese craft began sending out distress signals at 5 a. m. She reported her position as latitude 50:15 north and longitude 178:25 east, which placed her southwest of the Aleutians.

The freighter struck heavy seas, shifting her cargo badly.

At 1:45 p. m. she wirelessed:

"Have 16-degree list, lost rudder and drifting helplessly."

The Seiyo, en route from Portland to Yokohama, carried no passengers, her agent said.

She is a steel vessel of 6,550 gross tonnage, owned by the Mansei Kisen Kaisha and operated by the Yamashita Shipping Co. She was built in Glasgow in 1913.

U. S. Aviator Escapes From Custody in Chile

Concepcion, Chile, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The American aviator, Edward Orville de Larin, was unofficially reported today to have escaped from the detention quarters where he had been held since his arrest for alleged participation in an abortive revolt September 22. De Larin and Reid Smith, another American aviator, brought a group of Chilean revolutionists by airplane from Argentina. When the revolt failed the Americans were arrested along with the conspirators.

CLARK TO YIELD HOUSE SEAT TO COLE, IS BELIEF

Will Regain Maryland Post Lost Two Years Ago, Forecast.

ZIHLMAN PREDICTING 4,000-VOTE VICTORY

PROSPECT OF HILL'S TRIUMPH NOT BRIGHT

Goldsborough, Linthicum and Gambrill, Democrats, Are Thought Secure.

By EDWARD T. FOLLIARD.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—In estimating the Democratic gain in the Seventy-second Congress, Jouett Shouse can count on Maryland for at least one House seat.

There seems to be little doubt that when the ballots are counted on Tuesday, the winner in the Second Congressional District of Maryland will be William P. Cole, jr., the Democratic candidate. Cole was in the House in the last Congress, but was swept out in the Hoover landslide of two years ago. Now he is out to win back his seat from the Republican who defeated him—Linwood L. Clark.

Normally the Second District is Democratic. Generally speaking Republicans have won in that district only on occasions when there has been a Republican landslide. Two years afterward the district generally has sent a Democrat back to the House and that, it appears, is what is going to happen Tuesday.

Zihlman Is Confident.

Representative Clark is one of the two Republicans in the Maryland delegation in the House, the other being Representative Frederick N. Zihlman, of the Sixth District. As was pointed out in The Post yesterday, Zihlman is in the battle of his political life. A prudent man, however, would hardly bet that David J. Lewis, his Democratic opponent, will beat him. If he did feel like betting, he could find plenty of Republicans here who are ready to give odds of 2 to 1 that Zihlman will win.

Representative Zihlman, who, by virtue of the fact that he is chairman of the House District committee, is called the "Mayor of Washington," is confident that he will be reelected. In an interview here today, he estimated that he would win by at least 4,000 votes.

Sidewalk Political Test.

A friend of Zihlman challenged T. Post representative to walk down Baltimore street, the main street here and ask ten men who they favored in the congressional race—Zihlman or Lewis. This friend predicted that eight out of ten men would say that they would vote for Zihlman.

Though it made him feel silly, The Post's representative took Zihlman's friend up on the proposition, and did just what he suggested. He walked down Baltimore street and buttonholed ten men. He asked each one whom he favored in the congressional race—Zihlman or Lewis. Seven out of ten said they would vote for Zihlman. If that ratio holds good throughout the Sixth district, Zihlman will hold his seat and continue as chairman of the House District committee.

Hill Has Chance.

The Republicans have only one other chance of capturing a House seat in Maryland, and that is in the Third district. The candidates there are the incumbent, Representative Vincent Palmisano, a Democrat, and John Philip Hill, a Republican, who once represented that district in the House. The Third district, made up largely of persons of foreign birth, or persons whose parents are of foreign birth, is overwhelmingly wet. The prohibition question, however, is not an issue in the Third district.

JOBLESS PLAN OF CINCINNATI HELD AS IDEAL

Scheme of Coordination of All Units in City Is Praised by Woods.

PROGRAM TO COVER FIVE-YEAR PERIOD

Du Pont Co. Expects to Crowd Repairs in Next Six Months.

MORE BIDS TO BE LET ON BOULDER DAM SITE

Four Tunnels Will Be Driven at Estimated Cost of $20,000,000.

With the general organization of the President's emergency committee for employment virtually complete, Col. Arthur Woods yesterday indicated definitely how he expects American cities, confronted with the major portion of the unemployment problem, to deal with their conditions.

The so-called Cincinnati plan, worked out over the last eighteen months under the direction of former City Manager C. O. Sherrill, one time director of public buildings and parks in Washington, is held up by Col. Woods as an example of effective procedure.

"What has been accomplished in Cincinnati," said Col. Woods, "ought to be made a study by other cities similarly situated, and its adoption, in modified form if necessary, would undoubtedly prove most helpful in coping with the present situation."

All Agencies Coordinated.

Cincinnati prepared itself to meet the emergency by a scheme of coordination of all community sources in the municipal region. The central committee, composed of seventeen members, includes representatives of industry, labor, welfare societies, educational organizations and governmental agencies. A complete link-up of all agencies with the city government is achieved, and the plan, established before the present emergency development, is regarded as permanent institution.

It aims to coordinate the city, county and school districts in a well-balanced five-year improvement program at a reasonable tax rate and made flexible to be adapted to speeding up public work in times of unemployment.

A subcommittee on State-city employment exchanges has strengthened the employment service by establishing direct contact with industrial plants. To a large committee representative of all sections of the city has been assigned the task of approaching residents and soliciting minor repair jobs and clean-up campaigns. Another important activity is the committee of continuous employment, charged with the larger problem of stabilization. Other committees include those on budget and finance, State and national cooperation, transients, fact-finding, publicity and education.

Du Pont Plans Program.

Col. Woods also announced that he has been informed by Irenee du Pont, that the Du Pont Corporation in addition to the building program now under way expects to crowd into the next six months work on plant repairs, renewals and replacements which ordinarily would be carried over a much longer period. Although Col. Woods was not told how great the expenditure of this enlarged program would entail, he believes that it will play an important part in the industrial situation in many sections as the Du Pont Co. and its subsidiaries have 70 plants throughout the country.

In addition to the 500 jobs which will be provided on Boulder Dam construction as the result of bids for contracts to be advertised November 15, the Interior Department will be ready December 1 to call for bids for considerable more of the work to be

WILD WELL HALTED AS OIL RIVER BLAZES

Troops Are Still on Duty to Guard City From Peril of Gas Pockets.

NO-FIRE BAN ENFORCED

Oklahoma City, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Mere man and his tools triumphed today over the gigantic force of a wild gusher, which for three days had threatened this oil-bound city with potential disaster.

A great iron die nipple connection late today was anchored into place over the volcano-like casing of the rampant No. 1 C. E. Stout gusher of the Morgan Petroleum Co., master gates were closed and the well—a mile from the center of Oklahoma City's busiest corner—was tamed.

But before the Stout well bowed to the will of the workers the last gesture of its fury emerged 7 miles downstream in the oil-covered North Canadian River on the south bank of which the gusher is located. Fire broke out in the stream and great clouds of black smoke could be seen for miles.

Only a small area, however, was burning; the river current checked the progress of the fire upstream, while it burned itself out in the other direction. The blaze was not regarded as dangerous despite the ominous smoke column and the leaping flames. Its origin unknown, the fire came exactly 24 hours after a blaze had swept oil-soaked grass a mile and a half north of the angry gusher, precipitating a panic in Negro sections in southeast Oklahoma City before it was stamped out. The wild well had filled the river with oil for 5 miles.

With the triumph of the oil crews and their 48-foot tool, strict fire rules laid down in a wide area about the

TWO DIE AS STORMS HIT FRANCE, ENGLAND

Channel Shipping Imperiled; Two Killed in Paris by Falling Objects.

PROPERTY DAMAGE HUGE

London, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—A storm which caused considerable damage and injured a number of persons tore at the English Channel and the southern and midland counties of England today.

The cross-channel steamer Maid of Orleans reported four passengers injured when a great wave struck her while she was en route from Boulogne to Folkstone. Two windows on the port side of the ship were stove in.

The Essex shore, near the mouth of the Thames, was struck by a miniature tornado. Motor cars were blown over in the streets, pedestrians were thrown down, several roofs were stripped and large trees were uprooted. The wind continued at tornado violence for only two or three minutes, but an extraordinary heavy thunderstorm, with sleet and rain continued over the area all day.

The Greek steamer Menelaos signaled during the afternoon that she was very seriously damaged, reporting from 2 miles south of St. Catherines Point, Isle of Wight. A lifeboat put out from shore and was standing by late today.

From other points on the southern coast came reports of barges and other small craft in trouble and of rescues by lifeboats or motor boats. No loss of life had been reported early tonight.

That the gale extends across the southern North Sea was disclosed by Lloyds' report from Flushing, saying the British brigantine Cecelia was

NATION WAITS VOTE AS FIERY CONTESTS END

Party Chieftains Agree Democrats Will Add to Their Strength.

OUTCOME MAY HINGE ON DEPRESSION ISSUE

Wet and Dry Fight Tends Toward Breakdown of Partisan Lines.

BOTH SIDES REFUSE TO CONSIDER DEFEAT

Morrow, Norris, McCormick and Heflin Campaigns Stir Keen Interest.

(Associated Press.)

The political nerves of the Nation are tightening for tomorrow's vote on who's to be who in Congress and in 32 State capitals next year.

Party leaders agree that the Democrats will bolster their strength in both the Senate and the House, but only the count can reveal whether the present Republican majorities will be overturned.

Statements published yesterday vivified anew the debate on the course of President Hoover and his administration as to the tumble of business and the rise of unemployment. Two Republican spokesmen called again for his vindication at the polls, and a Democrat for his repudiation.

Leaders of both parties remain adamant in expressing confidence of the verdict.

Scored for Obstruction.

Secretary Lamont, in Washington, brought up the 1932 presidential election—about which many conjectures have been raised during the campaigns. He asserted that the Democratic party is without a program now, would be if it should organize Congress, and—looking ahead two years—will "continue to obstruct" the Hoover program.

Senator George, of Georgia, on the other hand, said the Democrats "stand ready to go the limit" to relieve unemployment. His statement assailed the administration's handling of that problem, as well as its farm relief and tariff measures.

Representative Wood, in Chicago, as chairman of the Republican congressional committee, charges Alfred E. Smith and James M. Cox with misrepresenting the administration's policy in connection with the industrial situation. They were the Democratic presidential nominees in 1928 and 1920.

Meanwhile, the organized dry forces last night issued a call for support of candidates favoring national prohibition. The Antisaloon League headed the list of the six organizations.

Expect No Compromise.

"We join in the declaration," the statement said, "that the friends of prohibition will not compromise the principle of national, constitutional prohibition."

The voters of Illinois and Rhode Island pass on that principle by referendum tomorrow and Massachusetts does the same on its State enforcement act. The controversy has added to the tremendous activity in the campaigns, figuring also in Ohio, New York, Pennsylvania, Montana, New Jersey, Delaware and, to a lesser degree, in other widespread sections.

The eighteenth amendment repealists hail the election as destined to show an increase in the congressional strength for their cause, while advocates of the national law express assurance that the new Congress will be preponderantly dry, as it is now.

Another series of referends has a bearing on amelioration of the crucial unemployment difficulty. Twenty States have proposals for public works before them, calling for a total expenditure of $450,000,000. The materials and construction purchases, as

Japanese Plan to Subdue Head Hunters by Chemicals

Natural Allies of Formosan Aborigines, Rain, Cliffs, Jungles and Chasms, Make Civilization's Usual Tools for Slaughter Ineffective.

Tokyo, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Because the Formosan head hunters' natural allies—rain, jungle, cliffs and chasms—are making civilization's ordinary killing tools ineffective, the Japanese expedition of police and soldiers may resort to chemicals to subdue the rebellious Taiyal tribe of central Formosa.

Another savage stronghold was captured Saturday, according to delayed official dispatches from Formosa, but the job of rounding up and subjugating the grimly resisting savages was far from completed. The tribesmen, last week killed at least 86 Japanese in an uprising at Musha, a village in central Formosa.

Rainstorms hampered aircraft operations, while mountain guns and machine guns were unable to reach the primitive warriors hiding in the jungles and mountain caves. A dispatch received tonight by the ministry of overseas here says "because the topography largely nullifies bombing from the air and other offensive weapons, our troops are considering the use of chemicals." Another official dispatch said that "in order to minimise losses, the expedition was planning to burn the forests where the enemy is hiding."

A determined Japanese attack was launched yesterday afternoon and dislodged the aborigine defenders on the heights forming the eastern part of the village of Mahebo, 6 miles east of Musha. Two Japanese officers were killed, but other casualties were not specified.

Mahebo is a natural fortress practically surrounded by precipitious cliffs and deep gorges which are normally spanned by primitive suspension bridges. These, however, were destroyed by the savages.

The Japanese advanced on Mahebo from three sides and also bombed the Daughter of Admiral Dies From Infantile Paralysis

Miss Bancroft Gherardi, 17, Goddaughter of Former Kaiser and Niece of "Fighting Bob" Evans, Succumbs in New York.

Miss Bancroft Gherardi, 17 years old, goddaughter of the deposed Kaiser of Germany and member of a family celebrated in the naval annals of the United States, died yesterday morning in the Medical Center in New York City after a sudden stroke of infantile paralysis.

Her parents, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Walter R. Gherardi, the former the chief hydrographer of the Navy, now stationed in Washington, were at the bedside when death occurred.

Stricken and paralysed from the hips down while attending a private school nearby in Norwalk, Conn., Miss Gherardi was rushed to the Medical Center, where artificial respiration was administered in a futile effort to save her life.

Born in Berlin while her father was stationed in the American Embassy there as naval attache, she became the goddaughter of the kaiser, who evidenced a keen interest in her during the family's sojourn there. She has made her home in Washington on several occasions, principally when her father served as aid to Secretary of the Navy Curtis D. Wilbur about five years ago. He was confirmed as a rear admiral in June and subsequently named as chief hydrographer of the Navy after commanding the air squadron in the Pacific fleet.

She made her home at 11 East Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, with her parents and her elder sister, Miss Neville Gherardi, a prominent member of Capital society, who made her debut here about five years ago. She also is survived by two brothers, Walter R. Gherardi, jr., and Taylor Gherardi.

Miss Gherardi comes of a distinguished lineage on both sides of her family. She bears the name of her paternal grandfather, the late Rear Admiral Bancroft Gherardi. She is a result of the decisions, are expected to provide work for many.

Despite the influence the vote is certain to have on the immediate history of the country, the totals as usual will fall short of those cast in presidential election years. Take the registration in the two most populous States—New York and Pennsylvania—for instance. In the first, the registered number is 3,522,510, about 450,000 less than in 1928. The Pennsylvania registration figure is 4,089,000, almost 750,000 less than two years ago.

The gubernatorial campaigns in those States have been so fraught with complexity and intensity that national leaders of both parties believe the outcomes, of whatever turn, will have far-reaching consequences.

In New York the Republican State platform opposes prohibition for the first time. The party nominee, Charles H. Tuttle, seeks to wrest the governorship from Franklin D. Roosevelt. Dry Republicans have put up an independent candidate.

See Preferment Ahead.

Admirers of Roosevelt, a prohibition repealist as is Tuttle, consider that his reelection would make him a formidable candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination in 1932. Another repealist governor cited as a possible Democratic nominee is Ritchie, of Maryland, seeking his fourth consecutive term.

In Pennsylvania, the Republican party has had little trouble overwhelming opposition heretofore. But now it is split on the gubernatorial candidacy of Gifford Pinchot, some Republican elements bolting him as he did William Howard Taft in 1912.

The fracture in the ranks has given high courage to those backing the Democratic-Liberal candidate, John M. Hemphill, a prohibition opponent. Pinchot, a national figure for years, has been mentioned for the Presidency on an independent dry ticket.

These personalities and a number of others divide the attention of the country with the interparty struggle for power on Capitol Hill.

Borah Vote of Interest.

One of the outstanding men whose fortunes are watched is William E. Borah, in the Senate since 1907. He is expected to return to Idaho today after electioneering for Republican independent colleagues.

Others whose candidacies have aroused special interest, resulting in many a hope for some to succeed and some to be defeated, include:

Dwight W. Morrow, financier and diplomat, trying for public office for the first time, Republican senatorial nominee in New Jersey and advocate of repealing the eighteenth amendment.

J. Thomas Heflin, senator from Alabama since 1920, bolted Democratic presidential ticket in '28 and consequently ruled out of party primary this year, running for reelection as an independent.

Thomas J. Walsh, prosecutor of Senate's Teapot Dome investigation, senator since 1912, facing serious opposition by Republican antiprohibitionist nominee, Justice Albert J. Galen.

Longworth Up in Ohio.

Nicholas Longworth, Speaker of the House in last three Congresses, representative from Ohio.

George W. Norris, frequently an enemy of administration policies, denouncer of "the power trust," senator from Nebraska since 1913.

Ruth Hanna McCormick, defeated Senator Deneen for Republican nomination in Illinois, opposed by J. Hamilton Lewis, whom her late husband beat for reelection to the Senate in 1918.

Then, also, there's Representative John Garner, of Texas. He entered the House 27 years ago, is now the Democratic leader and would become Speaker in the event the Republican majority is wiped out. Tomorrow will tell.

day. This theory was strengthened by young Rest, who said that he had rescued Mrs. Peacock several weeks ago when she attempted to cross in the boat but proved unable to paddle it. At that time she was warned never to attempt using the boat by herself.

Mrs. Peacock came here to live with her father about a month ago, after separating from her husband in Cumberland, Md. She has two sons, James, 18, and Walter Peacock, 20, who live at the Eaton home. Funeral arrangements were awaiting the arrival of Lloyd Eaton and Charles Eaton, brothers of the dead woman, who live in Brighton, Pa.

The Potomac Heights Citizens Association has been campaigning for a bridge across the canal near the Eaton home for many months, but all efforts proved fruitless. The closest bridge to the homes about the Eaton residence is more than a mile away.

SUPPORT OF DRYS IN ELECTION URGED

Six Prohibition Organizations Join in Appeal to Nation's oVters.

WINE AND BEER ARE HIT

(Associated Press.)

An appeal for support of candidates in the election tomorrow who favor the maintenance and effective administration of the dry laws was issued jointly yesterday by six national prohibition organizations.

At the same time, the weekly Clipsheet issued by Dr. Clarence True Wilson, general secretary of the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, asserted the recent "wet ballyhoo" "challenges the competency of Government to make decisions and bring into effect" and "strikes at democracy itself."

The six prohibition organizations said: "In view of questions raised in the present election and the consideration of prohibition enforcement by the Government, we join in the declaration that the friends of prohibition will not compromise the principle of national constitutional prohibition."

Organizations Pushing Issue.

The statement was issued by the Antisaloon League, the board of temperance, prohibition and public morals of the Methodist Episcopal Church, the board of temperance and social service of the Methodist Episcopal Church South, the International Order of Good Templars, the International Reform Federation and the Woman's Christian Temperance Union.

"Any modification by writing into law a legal fiction giving a special privilege to the manufacturers of beer and wine to monopolize a trade in intoxicants," the statement said, "would impugn the sincerity of the Constitution and strike at the integrity of government.

"Our organizations and the multitudes of people who support them can never consent to the participation of the Government in the liquor business by so-called State control or otherwise. They believe it to be wrong, morally and economically, for the Government to permit a traffic which experience has shown to prey upon the appetites and weaknesses of its citizens.

Urge States to Cooperate.

"On the other hand, they pledge their support to all necessary measures to improve the administration of the criminal law or to make prohibition more effective, and they urge the States to assume the responsibility placed upon them by the 'concurrent power' clause of the eighteenth amendment."

The organizations expressed the belief that "the voters of the country ought to support in the elections those candidates who stand for the maintenance and effective administration of the prohibition laws and who will respect decisions effected by constitutional means at the ballot box."

The Clipsheet statement asserted that the "wet ballyhoo" means:

"That there are a few wealthy men in the United States who consider that they are 'the people,' who are financing the antiprohibition agitation and who consider the opinions of the masses absolutely inconsequential.

"That the Raskob (Democratic national chairman) machine holds in utter contempt the millions of prohibition Democrats in the South and West, believing that this whole matter is to be determined by control of organization rather than by the will of the people.

Claim Hoover Victory for Drys.

"That there are men in the Republican party who are willing to betray the great dry Republican majority to the wets despite the fact that the drys are responsible for the election of Mr. Hoover and have repeatedly given their mandate to administration by the return of Congresses having an overwhelming dry majority and the rolling up of an unprecedented dry support for Mr. Hoover in 1928."

The Clipsheet also said there had been an "unscrupulous, tireless movement in the Republican party for an adverse report on prohibition from the Law Enforcement Commission, which formerly held very correctly that the advisability of the policy was none of their business, having been determined by the people and by the Congress."

DISPUTE CONTINUES ON JOBS CAMPAIGN

Republicans Say President Started Year Ago to Aid Jobless.

GEORGE RENEWS CHARGE

(Associated Press.)

The dispute over administration policies and acts was continued yesterday in statements issued at Republican and Democratic headquarters.

Representative Wood, chairman of the Republican congressional committee, cited speeches by two former Democratic presidential nominees in repeating his charge of a campaign to misrepresent the President. He said the administration "began to move a year ago in easing the shock of the stock market crash and in relieving unemployment," in challenging statements to the contrary by Alfred E. Smith and James M. Cox.

Senator George, of Georgia, said administration leaders in Congress had failed to cooperate last spring with Democratic efforts to combat unemployment. He pointed to the Wagner unemployment bills, which passed the Senate "only to be choked to death by the Republican leadership in the House."

After saying the Democrats would "go to the limit" to relieve unemployment, Senator George concluded: "The signs indicate that the voters have resolved to prevent the beneficiaries of special privilege from holding up the American people."

After enumerating "false charges" made against the administration by Democrats, Wood concluded:

"I have too much faith in the good sense of the American people to believe they are going to hand over the legislative branch of the Government to such leadership."

Nicaragua Quiet During Elections

Liberals Gain in Voting Under Supervision of U. S. Troops.

Managua, Nicaragua, Nov. 2 (A.P.). The Nicaraguan congressional elections, supervised by 300 United States sailors and marines and the national guard, took place today. They were the quietest in the country's history.

Incomplete returns, tabulated up to 8 p. m., showed the Liberals leading in most of the districts. In Granada, hitherto a Conservative stronghold, they won one district and lost La Parroquia by a small margin.

The headquarters of the American electoral mission reported that except for occasional arrests for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, there had not even been minor disturbances in the whole country. Trouble had been feared in the northern section from the insurgent leader, Gen. Augustino Sandino.

well were lifted partially. Firemen and approximately 75 men and eight officers of the National Guard, which had been on duty since late Friday, remained to patrol sections nearest the well. No-fire bans were enforced in lowland sections, where it was believed gas pockets remained.

E. M. Fry, city manager, warned the gusher's human neighbors that serious hazards still existed, due to gas saturated atmosphere and oil covered roofs, lawns and trees—sprayer constantly by the Stout well until today.

The gusher, which was believed to have increased its oil volume nearly 25 per cent over Saturday night, to perhaps 75,000 barrels daily, caused the closing of six schools, abandonment of nearby homes and smudged exclusive residence districts.

Governor to Campaign From Sickbed by Radio

Reno, Nev., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Illness which has confined Gov. Fred B. Balzar, of Nevada, to his bed will not prevent him from addressing his Republican constituents tomorrow.

A microscope will be placed in the governor's room and his voice will be broadcast over a public address system in a Reno auditorium where all Republican candidates for State office are scheduled to speak.

LAMONT SUPPORTS RUTH M'CORMICK

Urges Election to Senate as Aid to Cooperation in Government.

CONTEST NEARS CLIMAX

(Associated Press.)

Secretary Lamont last night urged the election of Ruth Hanna McCormick, the Republican senatorial nominee in Illinois, and the return of a Republican Congress in the election tomorrow.

In a statement through the Republican senatorial committee, the Secretary of Commerce asserted that "seldom has it been so essential that there be the fullest team play in the conduct of the Government as at this time while the country is passing through a period of business depression."

"During such a period," he added, "it seems to me that it would be unwise to handicap the Hoover administration by the election of a hostile Congress.

Democrats Are Scored.

"By its actions during the past year, its unfair criticism and misrepresentation, the opposition party has furnished a clear index of what may be expected if it is given control of the legislative machinery.

"It is without a program now; it will be without a program if it organizes the Congress and, with an eye single to the Presidency in 1932, it will continue to obstruct by every means it can command the carrying forward of the constructive program the President has put into operation.

"I think it is particularly desirable that we of the great State of Illinois reaffirm the confidence expressed in Herbert Hoover two years ago by electing Mrs. Ruth Hanna McCormick to the Senate and returning to the House a strong Republican delegation.

Contest in Illinois.

"In electing Mrs. McCormick the State will send to Washington one who not only will cooperate with the administration but one who is experienced in the affairs of Government through a lifetime study of political questions based upon fundamentals learned from her distinguished father."

Chicago, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The political pulse of Illinois beat high above normal tonight as two women and a man made their last fevered pleas for election to the United States Senate.

Representative Ruth Hanna McCormick concluded a busy day with a radio talk tonight in which she called again for support of Republican policies of protective tariff and avoidance of foreign alliances. Chicago audiences during the day heard her declare once more that prohibition was a social rather than a political issue and that her agreement to abide by the wet-dry referendum was in line with her belief in majority rule. They heard her assert that her Democratic opponent, James Hamilton Lewis, had supported the League of Nations in the Senate and was, therefore, a potential champion of the World Court. She continued her defense of Republican activity to relieve business ills and branded as false and absurd the statement that large sums of money were being spent in down-State counties to influence voters.

Assault on Dry Laws.

Lewis renewed his assault on national prohibition, which, he said, had taken away the right of individual States to determine their own liquor laws had placed a tremendous burden of taxation on business, and had bred widespread corruption and disrespect for law. He blamed the Republican party for business sluggishness and accused that party of tricking the farmers with unfulfilled promises. He denied that he had ever favored any plan of international agreement which would involve the United States Army and Navy. The candidate assailed Republican leadership on the ground that the Middle West had been ignored in Federal policies in favor of Eastern interests. He disclaimed any alliance with Mayor Thompson, of Chicago.

Mrs. Lottie Holman O'Neil, independent dry candidate, declared that unemployment is the principal issue and that it must be "met squarely by national and State cooperation." She charged that the major parties had agitated the prohibition issue until it had eliminated all others at a time when people were "eagerly and anxiously looking to their leaders to provide relief for the depressed economic conditions." She asserted that unemployment should have been brought up at the Republican convention instead of now. Responsibility of party leaders and excessive campaign expenditures were cited by her as the other main issues.

The Result of Fear

We have been afraid of hard times, and that fear has induced the thing we sought to avoid! We have curtailed normal expenditures in an effort to secure financial protection against business depression, and have thus lowered the demand for merchandise and created conditions of unemployment . . . Though, as individuals, we may be unaffected, we still have a moral and public responsibility to remedy the situation—and we have the power to do it . . . A reversal of our past program will secure the desired result. We need only revert to previous habits of spending to increase business activity with its consequent improvement in the employment situation . . . Let's do it!

CONVICTS IN ESCAPE TRY MAY FACE CHAIR

Death Charges Loom Against Sing Sing Trio in Plot Resulting in Killing.

SEARCH 2,230 INMATES

Ossining, N. Y., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Three Sing Sing prisoners were in solitary confinement today facing possible murder charges, a fourth was dead and prison authorities were conducting an investigation into last night's unsuccessful attempt by the four to shoot their way out of prison.

Meanwhile 100 keepers searched 2,230 convicts and their cells in an attempt to determine whether any others had guns. They found none, but in a cell block they discovered a hook and long rope similar to those the four men used in an effort to scale the wall.

Relatives today claimed the body of Harry Gordon, 23, Bronx robber, who took part with his three accomplices in a pitched battle with armed guards in the huge prison yard while sirens shrieked and flood lights glared.

Gordon, after slightly wounding Keeper Marquard, was himself killed by four bullets from the gun of Marquard, who is an expert shot. Herbert Davis, serving five years for grand larceny in the Bronx, was recovering today from a slight scalp wound received in the battle. Edward Ryan, who had escaped from the prison in 1928 and who was serving a long tterm for assault and gun-carrying, showed no ill effects from the fight with guards, nor did William Lapere, convicted robber from Manhattan, although they were captured only after tear gas had been used.

Warden Lawes disclosed today there is a possibility the three surviving prisoners may be prosecuted for murder. A precedent for such action was seen in the conviction and execution of three prisoners who took part in the Auburn riot, in which a convict was killed. They were convicted because a life was lost during commission of a felony. Mr. Lawes said, however, he would confer with the district attorney before deciding what action would be taken.

Motor Craft Crew Saved by Steamer

Radio Message Picked Up Tells of Rescue Off Cape May.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The Mackay Radio Station at Sayville today picked up a message from the steamer Sud Uruguayo saying it had saved the crew of the sinking motor craft Jupie, of Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, in latitude 38:04 north, longitude 69:35 west. The position indicated is about 400 miles east of Cape May.

Further messages said the Jupie was bound to Yarmouth from St. George, in the Bermudas. Those saved included Capt. Gardner, of Bermuda; Oscar H. Van Kassel, of Digby, Nova Scotia, and Erskin Mitchell, of the Bahamas. They had been drifting seven days when picked up. Although they were out of food, the Sud Uruguayo said the men were all in "fine condition." Their vessel had no cargo.

The only Jupie listed in available shipping records is a small British schooner of 16 net tons, which left Bermuda October 16 for St. Pierre Miquelon. The Sud Uruguayo is en route from Galveston to Montreal.

Police Search Woods For Robber of Woman

Montgomery County police of the Bethesda, Md., substation were searching the woods near Brookeville last night for a Negro who is said to have taken $284 in cash and checks and several articles of jewelry from Miss Mamie L. Johnson, as she was approaching her home at 562 East Bradley lane, Chevy Chase, Md.

Miss Johnson told the police that the Negro had tied her hands and feet after throwing a sack over her head. A Mr. Carter, of Washington, drove up as the man fled toward the Brookeville road. He released Miss Johnson and took her to the Bethesda station, where she reported the incident and gave a meager description of her assailant.

STORM-BOUND DO-X MAY START TODAY

Departure for Amsterdam, on First Leg of Flight to America, Balked.

CREW HELD IN READINESS

Altenrhein, Switzerland, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Storm warnings from English and Dutch weather stations today caused the German flying boat DO-X to postpone its departure for Amsterdam, on the first leg of its flight to Lisbon and thence to New York.

Instructions, however, were issued for the officers and crew to report at 7 a. m. tomorrow for a possible start at that time. It was believed the storms which have developed along the route so quickly might clear up just as suddenly. No definite announcement concerning the start was expected, however, until the early Monday weather reports had been studied.

A Zeppelin demonstrated during the afternoon that business was almost as usual by taking off for a short flight over Switzerland. The Zeppelin circled gleamingly over the DO-X's hangar.

A scheduled flight by the Zeppelin to Chemnitz, in Saxony, was called off on account of the weather to the north.

Officials at the Dornier works today repeatedly emphasized that the Amsterdam flight is not regarded as a start for America, but only as the first stage of a flight to Lisbon, whence the DO-X will fly toward New York by stages. Spokesmen admitted that the distinction might be difficult for the lay mind to grasp, but said their official information was that until their ship arrived at Lisbon, it will not be regarded as leaving for America.

The exact time of departure from Lisbon depends, as does that from Altenrhein, on the weather.

for both Hill and Palmisano are as wet as it is possible for candidates to be. They sincerely hate prohibition, and frankly say so. Hill, in fact, has risked a jail sentence to show his contempt for prohibition.

Hill, however, could not beat Palmisano when Hoover swept the State two years ago, said there is little reason to believe that he can do it when the Hoover administration is more or less ill-liked in the State of Maryland. As for the other three districts, the Democrats representing those districts appear to be safe so far as reelection is concerned.

They are Representative Alan Goldsborough, of the First district, who is opposed by Stengle Marine; Representative J. Charles Linthicum, who is leader of the House wet bloc, and who is opposed by W. O. Atwood, and Representative Stephen W. Gambrill, who is opposed by G. A. Kingsley Love.

HEARST ADVOCATES CHANGE IN DRY LAW

Attacks Prohibition ni Talk Over Radio and Indorses "Temperance Plan."

OFFERS TWO REMEDIES

Los Angeles, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—William Randolph Hearst, publisher, speaking over a National radio network tonight, advocated a "temperance plan to supplant prohibition."

Declaring he was a life-long advocate of temperance, Hearst said he had no sympathy for "the extreme wets" and on the other hand little sympathy for "the unreasonable drys."

Hearst declared the "policy of prohibition" unquestionably was a "noble experiment," but there is no question that in operation "it has proved an ignoble failure." He said antiprohibition sentiment was growing stronger each day and he believed the United States eventually would give up prohibition.

"It is not too soon to make plans to prevent the situation from reverting to what it was before prohibition went into effect," he said.

Two suggested remedies were offered by Hearst. One, he said, was modification of present laws to allow individual States to pass upon the question of prohibition and provide enforcement of laws they decide necessary, and the other, to retain control of liquor legislation in the Federal Government under modification of the eighteenth amendment.

The modifications he suggested under teh latter plan were: Federal control of restricted manufacture; Federal monopoly of liquor distribution, and Federal sale og such liquors, preferably light wines and beers, to responsible hotels, restaurants and similar purveyors.

Hearst said the latter proposal was the most feasible because of national unification of temperance legislation, and cited as favorable to the plan an income of from $800,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 a year from such control.

FORMER POTOMAC MAYOR SUCCUMBS

William Kleysteuber Expires Suddenly When Stricken by Heart Attack.

WIDOW SURVIVES HIM

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU.
907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Alexandria 823.

William Kleysteuber, 40 years old, former Mayor of the Town of Potomac, now a part of Alexandria, died suddenly last night at his home in Potomac. He is understood to have been in his usual health until about 5:30 o'clock, when he was stricken with a heart attack, dying two hours later. He is survived by his wife and one son, William Kleysteuber, jr.

Mr. Kleysteuber served two terms as Mayor of Potomac and two terms as member of the town council. He was a member of Henry Knox Field Lodge of Masons, of Potomac; Acca Temple, of the Mystic Shrine, of Richmond, and the Scottish Rite Masonic bodies of Alexandria. He was employed as a foreman electrician at the Southern Railway shops in Alexandria.

One of the most popular and best known citizens of Potomac, Mr. Kleysteuber had a large circle of friends who will be shocked at his sudden death. The funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Beginning with tonight's drill, members of Company I, First Infantry, Virginia National Guard, locally known as the Alexandria Light Infantry, who absent themselves from drill without previously having obtained permission, will be subject to summary court-marital and the imposition of fines ranging from $1 to $3, according to a statement issued by Capt. W. Cameron Roberts. Failure to pay the fines imposed will result in the offender being sent to jail for one day for each dollar of the unpaid fine.

This action is provided for in the National Guard regulations, according to Capt. Roberts, who states that it has become necessary to take drastic action on account of the poor attendance at drills.

The schedule of drills for November is as follows:

November 3, bayonet instruction drill and combat signals, close order drill; November 10, bayonet instruction, extended order drill, close order drill; November 17, drill and combat signals, extended order drill, close order drill; November 24, bayonet instruction, riot duty formation and close order drill.

The work of restoring two additional houses on the 100 block Prince street has been started, one being for Ward Brown, prominent Washington architect, with R. Wilmer Boiling as builder, and is known as 127 Prince street. This house will be occupied by Mr. Brown when completed. The second is known as 113 Prince street, which was recently purchased for Maj. Raymond Lee, also of Washington. These ancient buildings are to be restored to their original colonial appearance.

Another of the old buildings which is about completed is owned by Mrs. Lowndes Jackson, of Washington. Inspection of the premises will be permitted by card only, which may be obtained from Mrs. Charles H. Hooff, the idea being to give interested residents an opportunity to see the restoration work which has been in progress for several months.

Mrs. Hooff has announced that two more houses in this block have been purchased and will be restored, making a total of twelve buildings in this historic and interesting square which will be restored, as well as two on what is known as Wales alley, in the rear of the houses on the north side of Prince street between Lee and Union streets.

Upon completion of the improvement of the square on Patrick street between Wolfe and Wilkes streets, motorists will have a straight line from Oronoco street to the south, as the Patrick street road extends in a straight line to Hunting Creek Bridge. This was the only square of Patrick street not having a modern roadway with bituminous macadam over concrete base.

The city also will start the improvement of two squares on Henry street between Duke and Wilkes streets. This will be bituminous macadam over the existing roadway, which is paved with cobblestones, and will be 27 feet wide.

Regular Sunday night services will be resumed at the Chapel of the Good Shepherd, at the corner of Fairfax and Franklin streets, and the year's program will be started with a series of three evening services, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, at 8 o'clock. The speakers will be students from the Episcopal Theological Seminary of Virginia, two of them having had many years' experience with the Church Army of England, and the third being Mr. Mengers, superintendent of the Sunday school for the last two years. Singing will be led by a group of men from the Seminary, and the service will be added to by special solos and quartet numbers.

The regular Sunday night services will begin November 9, at 8 o'clock.

Alexandria Council and Belle Haven Council, Order Fraternal Americans, hold their annual memorial service for this year at the First Baptist Church next Sunday evening, November 9. A special program is being arranged for the occasion, and the pastor, the Rev. Pierce S. Ellis, will deliver an appropriate sermon.

Auto Crash Puts Town in Darkness

Lights in Harrisonburg Out for 25 Minutes as Pole Is Broken.

Special to The Washington Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., Nov. 2.—Harrisonburg was in total darkness for 25 minutes last night during the height of the Saturday night shopping rush as the result of an automobile knocking down a pole carrying high-tension lines to the city from the hydroelectric plant on the Shenandoah River. Edward Rouser, 30, colored, driver of the car, is in the hospital with minor injuries.

City workmen shut off the current from the hydro plant and transferred the load to the steam auxiliary plant on another line to restore the lights.

The pole was broken in two and hurled across the Chesapeake Western Railway tracks along the Elkton pike at Penn Laird, 6 miles east of here. The high-tension wires did not fall to the ground, but when they swung together the current was automatically cut off.

The car carrying the Clements family was in collision with a car loaded with Negroes and another automobile with two white passengers.

Woman Slightly Hurt by Auto.

Mrs. Jessie M. Locking, 45 years old, 810 Aspen street northwest, was slightly injured yesterday when struck by an automobile in front of her home. The automobile was driven by Chester M. Anderson, 26 Carroll Manor, Takoma Park. She was treated at home for bruises.

BALL URGES COUNTY MANAGER TRIUMPH

State Senator Hits Argument That Smaller Arlington Sections Would Suffer.

MAJ. KING FOR CHANGE

ARLINGTON COUNTY.
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

Advocating the county manager form of government for Arlington County, State Senator Frank L. Ball issued the following statement last night:

"The question of a change in form of the county government should be studied entirely separate and apart from the personalities of the officials, either present or prospective, and its adoption should not be considered as a criticism of the official actions of any one. I am concerned at this time with the adoption of the best system. Next year the voters will decide on the personnel at the general county election, regardless of the form which may be approved. The county manager form, with the council elected at large, offers the best features of the most approved modern forms of municipal government. It is not an experiment. It has been tried and experience has shown that it works. The most progressive cities of Virginia have it, as well as many towns, and the universal testimony is that it is the best form of municipal government yet suggested.

"After a careful examination of municipal government and eight years' experience as a county official, I unhesitatingly commend this form for the county of Arlington. We need to think and act as a county unit. We have been doing this in school matters since 1923, and certainly no one can say that this has not been the most progressive school era in Virginia. By abolishing the old magisterial districts, we can remove the lats vestige of sectionalism in our public affairs, eliminate district funds and district jealousies and contentions, and work solely for the benefit of the entire county.

"The governing board elected at large will give to each voter the right to a voice in the election of those who control his affairs. It does not mean that the thickly settled communities shall elect all of the representatives, but it does mean that residents of such communities shall not be denied the right to vote for representatives to attend to their business. It will eliminate the present situation where the residents of Washington and Jefferson districts, having a combined population of less than one-half that of Arlington district, nevertheless elect two out of the three members of the board of supervisors and can at any time control the board against the wishes of the majority of the electorate of the county.

"Our experience has shown that officers elected at large are often chosen from the thinly settled portions of the county. Two out of the last three Commonwealth's attorneys have been elected from sections far removed from the center of population. The same holds true of the sheriff's office. We have never had a treasurer from the heart of a thickly settled section. From our own local history any student will see that there is nothing in the argument that the smaller communities will be overlooked. My own feeling is that it is the best way to guarantee them proper representation.

"I am also convinced that the talk of increased cost of government and increased taxes is a myth. There is no necessity for any increase to put this form of government in effect. The possibility of increase of taxes is about the same under the new as under the old form of government, and there is little hope of any increase under either form. It is a better business method to handle our affairs under the proposed form than under the old and some economies should result. It at least does away with the possibility of passing the buck and definitely places the public finger on the man responsible for the executive work of the county.

"The new county government act gives no greater authority for the levying of license taxes on automobiles, business and professions than is possessed by the board of supervisors, and the likelihood of levying such license taxes would not in the least be changed by adopting the new form of government."

Senator Ball will be heard over the air tonight from 8:30 to 9 o'clock from Station WJSV, Mount Vernon Hills, Va.

Sitting back in an easy chair in his den at the home of his son-in-law, Dr. W. C. Welburn, at Ballston, Maj. William M. King, now in his ninety-ninth year, yesterday afternoon freely discussed the proposed change in the form of county government. He said that he anticipates much pleasure when tomorrow morning he will walk to the polls in Ballston and cast his vote for a change in the form of county government for Arlington County.

Maj. King has been a resident of Ballston for the past 39 years, and his ambition is to pass the century milestone, now almost within his grasp. He says he feels better today than he did a year ago.

The polls will open in the eleven voting precincts at 6:37 a. m. tomorrow, closing at 5:06 p. m.

With the question of a change in the form of county government to be voted upon in addition to members of Congress, indications are that the total vote in the county will reach close to 5,000. There are approximately 6,000 qualified voters.

The Holy Name Society of St. James' Catholic Church at West Falls Church will hold its November meeting tomorrow evening at the rectory.

The Master Plumbers Association of Arlington County has started arrangements for a dance to be given in the Odd Fellows Hall at Clarendon, the evening of November 15. Music will be furnished by Myer's Orchestra.

Friendship Circle of the Ballston Christian Church will hold its monthly meeting tonight at the home of Miss Ann Calvert.

Ballston Council, No. 20, Daughters of America, will meet tomorrow night in the auditorium of the Ballston Firemen's Hall.

The weekly luncheon club of the Arlington Post, No. 139, American Legion, will meet tomorrow at 12 o'clock in the Rucker Building at Clarendon.

Ballston Council, No. 221, Junior Order United American Mechanics, will meet Wednesday night in the firemen's hall.

INCREASE IN BANK DEPOSITS IS SHOWN

24 Cities of Fifth Federal Reserve District Have Gain of $281,158.

DECREASE FROM 1929

Richmond, Va., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Aggregate debits to individual accounts in banks of 24 leading cities in the Fifth Federal Reserve District during the five weeks ended October 15 showed a seasonal increase of $281,158,000, or 22.1 per cent over a like period immediately preceding, William W. Hoxton, chairman, said in the district monthly review tonight.

The increase was said to be due to quarterly settlements on October 1 and to the opening of early fall trade.

Twenty-two of the reporting cities showed higher figures for the more recent period while only two failed to show the usual increase.

In comparison with figures reported for five weeks last year ended October 16, 1929, corresponding figures for the five weeks ended October 15, 1930, showed a decrease of $132,601,000, or 7 per cent.

Mr. Hoxton said this was not a wholly unfavorable comparison in view of generally lower price levels prevailing this year.

All of the reporting cities showed lower 1930 figures, except three, Asheville, Newport News and Richmond.

The cities and their debits follow:

Asheville, N. C., $40,770; Baltimore, $512,062; Charleston, S. C., $30,483; Charleston, W. Va., $44,874; Charlotte, N. C., $54,882; Columbia, S. C., $27,741; Cumberland, Md., $11,075; Danville, Va., $8,733; Durham, N. C., $30,402; Greensboro, N. C., $24,445; Greenville, S. C., $19,809; Hagerstown, Md., $10,712; Huntington, W. Va., $22,710; Lynchburg, Va., $24,892; Newport News, Va., $13,001; Norfolk, Va., $61,778; Portsmouth, $4,827; Raleigh, N. C., $31,783; Richmond, Va., $178,373; Roanoke, Va., $32,141; Spartanburg, S. C., $14,033; Washington, D. C., $295,827; Wilmington, N. C., $16,342; Winston-Salem, N. C., $42,978.

CAMPBELL ASSERTS BALLISTICS IS SHAM

Man Tried in Mary Baker Case Launches Crusade on Study of Guns.

ARMY MAN CHALLENGED

Herbert M. Campbell and his brother, Frank G. Campbell, have instituted a crusade to prove that ballistics is simply a speculative theory and not an exact science.

Less than 48 hours after he had been acquitted on a charge of killing Mary Baker Herbert Campbell forwarded a telegram to Maj. Julian S. Hatcher, Ordnance Department, U. S. A., defying him to prove his belief that ballistics is exact.

Maj. Hatcher is reported to have said that if Col. Goddard said a certain gun fired a certain bullet, it must be so.

Mr. Campbell's telegram is as follows:

"I have noted your statement that ballistics is exact. I challenge you to make a series of tests in accordance with the specifications agreed upon by Col. Calvin H. Goddard at my trial. See if you can make a better job of it than he did.

"It took him four hours to select my gun when my life was at stage. It took him four days to examine five guns when his own reputation was at stake. Please accept or eject this challenge as I am retaining Dr. Albert H. Hamilton, my ballistics expert, until I hear from you."

The former defendant in the celebrated murder trial has committed himself to a crusade to prove that ballistics is a sham. In a statement last night he said: "Every time that so-called ballistics crops up in cases in this section of the country and the safety of some guiltless person is at stake you can count upon my brother, Frank, and myself to be in the thick of the fight to prove that ballistics is a sham."

WASHINGTON COUPLE HURT IN ROAD CRASH

Marvin J. Gloyd, Soccer Star, and Companion Are in Serious Condition.

RAN INTO PARKED CAR

Two Washingtonians are in serious condition in the Frederick City Hospital, Frederick, Md., following an automobile accident early yesterday morning on the Gaithersburg pike, near Clarksburg, Md.

The accident occurred, it is said, when a car driven by Marvin J. Gloyd, of 45 M tareet northwest, struck another automobile parked at the side of the road. Mr. Gloyd and Mrs. Mary Haller, 23 years old, of 529 G street southeast, were returning to Washington from Gaithersburg, where they had been visiting Mrs. Haller's parents. As their car rounded a curve in the highway it crashed into the machine of Willis H. Meuhler and Francis Conroy, students at Georgetown University, who had run out of gasoline and were parked near the edge of the road.

Mrs. Haller and Mr. Gloyd were rushed to the Frederick Hospital by a passing motorist. Gloyd is suffering from a fractured skull and internal injuries and Mrs. Haller is said to have received a broken jaw and severe lacerations about the body. Neither Mulher or Conway were hurt in the collision.

Gloyd, who is 28 years old, is employed by the General Electric Co. in Gaithersburg, and for a number of years has starred with the soccer team of that town.

ONE of a series of statements dealing with present conditions favorable to investment in BONDS, PREFERRED STOCKS, COMMON STOCKS AND INVESTMENT TRUST SECURITIES

Sound Investment Trust Securities

Buy Now for Income and Profit

OUTSTANDING opportunities in the financial markets are usually recognized only after they have passed. Fortunes are built by those who recognize them while they exist.

The fortune of the Rothschild family was founded through the special opportunities that arose following the Napoleonic wars . . . The fortune of the house of Morgan is said to have been started through the purchase of insurance company stocks following a disastrous fire in New York City . . . Purchasers of Liberty Bonds at the low prices of a few years ago assured themselves a safe six per cent return for many years on the strongest investment in the world.

Such opportunities as these may happen only once in a generation—once in a century. But, in a lesser degree, there appear to be opportunities today—created by unusual circumstances—that will be recognized in the future as the source of fortunes that are being built now.

In a search for these opportunities, the far-sighted investor today will not overlook the field of investment trusts.

There are two principal types of investment trusts—both fundamentally sound from an investment standpoint and both especially interesting today. These two types are—the Management Trust and the Fixed Trust.

MANAGEMENT TRUSTS represent a plan by which the investor secures wide diversification and scientific management for his dollar by pooling his resources with those of hundreds or thousands of other investors and, in effect, hiring an experienced and capable manager for the entire fund. The soundness of this plan has been demonstrated by many decades of experience in Great Britain. Some of the best banking houses and best financial brains in America supply the management for certain of these trusts whose securities are now available. Like other investments which participated in the stock market decline of last autumn, management trust securities are today definitely on the bargain counter.

DIVERSIFICATION

The keystone of successful and profitable investment lies in Diversification. Two good investments are always better than one—and ten are better than two. This is because diversification gives the investor the protection of the law of averages—so that any possible decline in the value of one investment will be offset by gains in others.

Proverbs of all nations reflect this fundamental truth . . . Don't put all your eggs in one basket . . . Keep more than one iron in the fire . . .

The investment trust—either of the management or fixed type—is a device by which any investor may automatically gain diversification in his investment.

FIXED TRUSTS are a distinctively American type of investment which have shown a deserved and extraordinary growth in popularity in recent months. In this type of trust—as the name implies—the underlying investments are fixed and usually a very substantial banking institution is appointed trustee to safeguard the interests of the investor. The portfolios of the majority of fixed trusts consist of a carefully selected list of securities—usually common shares—so chosen as to provide a comprehensive cross-section of successful American industry. If American industry continues to grow and prosper, such a cross-section can hardly fail to prove profitable. Investors who—during the past ten years—have bought and held a diversified selection of the best common stocks have reaped large profits and enjoyed a liberal income. The fixed trust places this opportunity within the reach of every investor.

Naturally, careful selection is necessary. There are investment trusts and investment trusts. Not every security which bears this honorable name is a worthy one. But the investor who purchases a sound investment trust security—of either the fixed or management type—properly sponsored by conservative bankers—will find the present an opportune time to make his selections—considering both income and possibilities for profit.

JEWS AT PROTEST MEETING NEAR RIOT

Police Called to Handle Jam Caused by Overflow; Britain Denounced.

NOTABLES MAKE TALK

New York, Nov. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—With 18,000 Jews jammed into Madison Square Garden tonight in a protest against Great Britain's new policy in regard to the Palestine homeland, a mob of 5,000 more stormed the doors, swept aside the few policemen on duty and soon were in such a turmoil that three emergency wagons had to be sent for and Police Commissioner Mulrooney called to take personal charge of the situation. Traffic at Eighth avenue and Fiftieth street was completely blocked as the crowd wedged itself into the street.

Firemen on duty at the Garden closed the doors at 7:30 p. m., when, they said, the great hall was packed to the doors.

With a capacity audience already inside, people, all claiming to hold tickets, continued to arrive in droves, and police found themselves entirely unable to cope with the situation.

Police Wagons Drive Through Mob.

The emergency wagons were driven through the mob onto the sidewalks, saving the reinforcement of policemen the necessity of battling through the crowds to the doors.

No one was injured.

The thousands of Jews thronged in Madison Square Garden applauded denunciations of the British Labor government by Zionist leaders and non-Jew political leaders for the recent white paper in which the British government forbade further immigration into Palestine and restricted the further purchase of land by Jews from the Arab owners.

A statement of the Zionist position was drawn up in the form of a resolution and passed without opposition. The resolution asserted that "the trust solemnly assumed has now been repudiated" and declared that the British government's assertion that further immigration would be economically unwise was not true and was merely a mask to cover the real reasons, entirely political, behind the British action.

Wagner Points Out Hope.

Senator Wagner told the audience they could rest their confidence in the ultimate outcome of the situation on the fact that the Balfour declaration, upon which Jewish Palestine is founded, was backed up by the entire civilized world.

Emanuel Neumann, president of the Jewish national fund, replied to an attack on the policies of the national fund contained in the British white paper report on Palestine.

He pointed out that every acre of land taken over by Jews in Palestine was bought from the Arab owners "at a very high price" and that the remaining Arab farmers had profited considerably from Jewish irrigation and reclamation projects which did not cost them anything.

Warburg Scores Policy.

Felix M. Warburg, who resigned as a member of the Jewish agency in protest of the British action, attacked the white paper written by Lord Passfield on the ground that it misrepresented the actual situation in Palestine as far as the economic resources of the country were concerned.

William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor; Lieut. Gov. Lehman, Bernard S. Deutsch, president of the American-Jewish Congress, and Representative Hamilton Fish spoke.

undertaken. The first of the tasks at the dam site will be that of driving four tunnels, each 50 feet in diameter and about 1 mile long. These tunnels will cost from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000.

Col. Woods' organization, composed of an expert of public works, to boost employment demand in Government spheres; an expert on private industrial enterprises in touch with business activities, and a woman familiar with problems of home economics is urging the establishment of State committees of similar character under which county committees would function.

In considering the unemployment situation, the American Federation of Labor yesterday warned that while temporary measures were necessary that unless developed with a view to getting at the causes of unemployment and making permenant adjustments, a constructive opportunity would be lost. Wherever unemployment committees are at work, the federation believes they should find it necessary first, to provide shortened hours to create more jobs; and maintain wage scales to preserve buying power.

Mrs. Franklin Adams, of Washington, D. C.

H. Murray Jacoby, Brig Gen. William Wright Harts and Charles L. Cooke were designated to represent the United States as special emissaries. The Duke of Gloucester represented Great Britain.

The coronation gives Ras Tafari, who claims descent from King Solomon and the Queen of Sheba, the titles of emperor, Lord King of Kings of Ethiopia, conquering Lion of the Tribe of Judah, the Elect of God and the Light of the World.

Consort Also Crowned.

Simultaneously the royal consort, Princess Wazirn Menep, a short, rotund woman of 40, was crowned as Queen Etega Menen, queen of queens of Ethiopia. This was virtually the queen's coming-out party, as she has heretofore been confined to her housewifely and motherly duties in the royal household. She has five children, one married, and has taken no active part in court or state affairs.

The coronation ceremony, performed by the venerable Coptic Archbishop of Ethiopia, was unparalleled in modern times for quaintness, color and magnificence. The cost to the government was estimated at $3,000,000. For six months, the nation has been preparing holiday garb for the occasion.

As their majesties rode to the church through the dusty streets of the mountain capital, which were packed with tens of thousands of their braves and chieftains, the masses thundered forth cheers and wild, savage cries of acclaim. Scores of natives were trampled in the dust as the crowd surged to catch sight of the coronation party.

Tribal Chiefs Escort.

On either side of the colored potentates, acting as escorts of honor, were olive-skinned, black-bearded and curly-headed Ethiopian princes and tribal chiefs. They wore multicolored costumes of silk and satin, embroidered in gold and silver. Their shields were of hippopotamus hides, and they had medieval swords and scabbards. Behind the monarch and his queen were the high priests in vestments of scarlet, green, yellow or purple, carrying gold and silver croziers and incense lamps. Following the colesiastics were groups of princes and grandees in black silk ceremonial capes, and the members of the cabinet and the government in their national shammas.

Ras Tafari and his queen rode in the imperial chariot which once belong to the former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany. The carriage was drawn by six snow-white horses.

Arriving at the Church of St. George, they descended from the chariot, their coronation robes of scarlet and gold glittering in the sun. The sunlight was reflected fiercely from the gold and diamonds on their crowns, where the figure of the lion of Judah symbolized the national power.

Church Proves Too Small.

The foreign princes, ministers and delegates had already taken their places in the church, which proved too small, in spite of recent additions, for the throngs which clamored for admission. Their majesties found difficulty in making their way through the crowd to the inner sanctuary, where the coptic archbishop performed the religious rites and ceremonials. The atmosphere was murky, almost suffocating, with incense and the thick, stifling smoke of candles.

Small of stature, thin, frail, with delicate, almost feminine features, Ras Tafari nevertheless assumed a look of great dignity and solemnity as the archbishop placed the crown upon his head. Yet the emperor seemed dwarfed by Queen Waziru Menen, who is of Amazon proportions.

"God has anointed you to rule with justice," intoned the archbishop, as he crowned his liege. Then spoke the pontiff:

"Gird the sword on your loins and rule in peace. May the Lord God, supreme ruler of men, bless and glorify your reign, and may he ever keep you and your consort in his bosom."

Followed by Native Dance.

The coronation was followed by a dance of the high priests in front of the church, to the time of low, rhythmical chants, accented by monotonous drumbeats and the clash of cymbals. The priests, bearded and mantled, swayed their bodies violently to and fro, according to the peculiar Ethiopian ritual, and waved their long, gold-headed prayersticks like wands.

After the royal pair had left the church, they were driven, amid fresh outbursts of applause, to a great, lavishly decorated coronation dais in the big square in front of the palace. In front of them, tethered to the platform and growling like captive beasts in a Roman arena, were a quintet of fierce-looking lions, with beautiful golden-brown manes, guardians of the throne of Ethiopia and national symbol of power.

The ruling princes and chiefs from the outlying provinces were admitted to their presence in processional order. As they approached the rulers, they prostrated themselves, touching the earth with their foreheads as an indication of their submission and homage. Beside the sovereigns stood the crack guardsmen of the palace, tall, stalwart youths, brilliantly uniformed, who guard their monarchs' lives and lead the way into battle.

Prisoners Are Released.

To signalize his coronation and spread peace and good will among the country's 10,000,000 population, the king released several hundred political and criminal offenders, also conferred the Order of the Conquering Lion of Judah on a number of cabinet members, princes and tribal chiefs.

The most striking of the day's festivities was a Gargantuan open-air banquet of raw meat and tej, a wine made from fermented honey and flavored with herbs, which the emperor gave to 25,000 of his tribesmen. Five thousand cattle were slaughtered on the spot for the feast.

The young emperor considered it a day of triumph. At the end of the ceremonies, he fell on his knees and gave thanks to God. Abyssinia has been a Christian country for 1,600 years.

NATIONAL CITY BANK SEES END OF SLUMP

Increased Stability of Prices on Commodities Among Trends Noted.

UPTURN IN AUTOS CITED

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The extent and duration of the business slump leaves little doubt but that the depression in this country is now scraping bottom, says the National City's monthly survey of economic conditions.

In support of its statement the review cites increasing stability of commodity prices, pronounced improvement in the textile industry and the tendency of the automobile industry to move counter to the customary seasonal downward trend. On the other hand, it asserts, activity in steel receded steadily in October and freight car loadings continued to decline.

Unemployment May Get Worse.

Pointing out that the coming months are not months in which decisive upward movements are likely to be started, the review says unemployment is "likely to get worse before it gets better, both by reason of the slack season and the tendency for industry to reduce costs through greater use of labor-saving devices and methods."

Industry's progress in eliminating waste, the bank believes, is a factor "which is gradually building the foundations of a new prosperity."

"Under pressure of reduced volume of business and lower prices," the survey continues, "business men have been going over their organizations with a fine tooth comb, subjecting every process to a rigid inspection with a view to finding ways and means of improving methods, eliminating unnecessary man power and paring costs to the irreducible minimum. And the results in many cases are most impressive. * * *

Cost Not Entirely Lost.

"Thus the cost of business recession is not entirely lost. Economies which it has stimulated will show up in increased profits once revival begins, and business will emerge from this period revitalized and in better shape than ever to move forward.

"Meantime, economies of operation, showing up as they do in lower retail prices, are assisting revival by tending to offset the reduced purchasing power of the larger sections of the population.

"Nowhere are the fruits of reduced costs more strikingly illustrated than in the automobile industry, where new and deeper cuts into price lists are being announced, notwithstanding the remarkable record already achieved by this industry in this respect."

RASKOB ADVOCATES SUPERROAD PLAN

Urges That 500-Foot Highway Be Built Across the Continent.

GIVES PLAN OVER RADIO

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Superhighways across the United States as a measure to restore prosperity and at the same time fulfill a national need was advocated tonight by John J. Raskob in a radio address over a Nation-wide hook-up during Collier's hour.

"We have reached a point where the number of motors are so clogging the highways that motoring on week-ends and holidays is no longer the pleasure it used to be," said Mr. Raskob.

"We must, therefore, develop and build what I will term superhighways, thus not only providing work for millions of people over a long period of years, but making possible the further building up of our industries to care for the automobile demand of 7,000,000 or 8,000,000 motor cars annually, requiring the production of countless millions of dollars of materials of every kind, with consequent more stable employment conditions."

Mr. Raskob urged adoption of the plan of former Senator Coleman du Pont providing for an appropriation of $5,000,000 to cover a survey for a 500-foot right of way to carry a superhighway across the United States. He said this work could be undertaken immediately.

World's Trade to Grow, Radio Speaker Asserts

(Associated Press.)

William L. Cooper, director of the Commerce Department's Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, said in a radio address last night that "there are already signs that the world's trade is ready to continue its slow but steady growth."

Speaking over the Columbia Broadcasting System, Mr. Cooper added that "with our vastly improved efficiency in foreign trade we intend to take advantage of every favorable opportunity."

Mr. Cooper said the principal cause of the world-wide trade recession was overproduction, while another important factor was the prevailing high interest and discount rates.

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

FOR BETTER TIMES.

The Government's building program will make a notable contribution toward relief of the unemployed. Projects for construction of Federal buildings, naval and merchant vessels involve a total expenditure of approximately $1,000,000,000. Most of this work is under contract. Plans for the remainder are being rushed to completion. In addition, the Treasury is launching new surveys and speeding up plans for repairs on Government buildings.

This program will extend over several years. It should have a decided influence for the stabilization of employment. Nevertheless, the relief it affords will be temporary, and it can not be regarded even as an attempt to solve the unemployment problem. The very fact that this building activity is being accelerated now to take up the slack in industrial enterprise means a slowing up later on. Money that goes into public buildings and naval vessels must come from the taxpayers' pockets. When the buildings are completed they will serve the needs of the Government, but they will not be sources of revenue.

It is essential that this program be regarded in its true light as a temporary expedient for relief of the unemployed. From the long range view prosperity can not be restored by adding employes to the Government's pay roll. It can only come through a revival of industry. Should the building program be interpreted as a solution, or even a partial solution of the unemployment program, economic recovery would probably be postponed rather than hastened on its way.

A return to normal conditions will be possible only when the causes of the depression have been removed. One of the fundamental causes is the inability of the average workman to purchase as much as he is capable of producing. Economists agree that there must be an adjustment. The backward step would be to reduce production to the current demand. That would perpetuate unemployment and encourage social unrest. The forward step would be to expand the income of the masses and raise their purchasing power to a level with their ability to produce.

Fortunately, events are moving in that direction. The first indication is lower commodity prices. Reports from the Department of Agriculture show that prices of farm products have fallen 25 per cent during the last year. As usual, the prices of raw materials have declined more than the prices of manufactured articles. But the downward trend has been general. A person with the same income can live better today than he could a year ago.

A second indication of this adjustment lies in the greater diversity of stock ownership. Since the stock market collapse last year many thousands of new security holders have been added to the rolls of great corporations. The tendency toward a wider distribution of wealth is noticeable.

A third indication lies in the general maintenance of wage schedules in spite of declining prices and a surplus of labor. Never before has a period of depression been so nearly free from wage slashing and labor strikes. A new philosophy has taken hold of American industrial leaders. They realize that a market for their goods is more important than any savings that might be made by lowering wages.

These are steps in the right direction. They indicate the way in which stability may be achieved. Perhaps they are the beginning of an evolution toward an entirely new economic goal. In the distress of the present emergency it is highly important that the public should not lose sight of these more fundamental elements of stability. While temporary relief is being fostered by the Government it is up to the industrial, financial and business leaders to work out means of extending the individual's purchasing and consuming power.

HERBERT CAMPBELL'S CASE.

The case of Herbert Campbell, acquitted of the charge of murder after a sensational trial in Washington, contains valuable pointers for jurists, legislators, prosecutors and defenders, and individuals who may serve upon juries. At one time during the trial it appeared that the fate of the defendant would hang upon the report of an expert in ballistics, who was said to have reduced his science to such a fine point that he could determine infallibly whether or not a certain bullet had been fired from a certain revolver. It had been alleged that a revolver owned by the defendant had fired the fatal shot and that the weapon had never been out of his possession. Therefore it was suggested that if the expert should testify positively that the fatal bullet had been fired from Campbell's revolver, guilt would be conclusively established.

While the expert was engaged in making tests with assorted bullets and revolvers, involving considerable time, the trial proceeded, and a complete alibi was established by the defendant. Documentary evidence as well as the testimony of several trustworthy witnesses convinced the jury that Campbell was innocent, and he was acquitted upon the first ballot.

This trial was expensive to the public and to the defendant. Why was it pressed by the prosecution, in the face of evidence, known to the prosecution, conclusively proving his innocence? Is the machinery of criminal prosecution so unmanageable, once it is set in motion to convict a defendant, that it can not be stopped when it is seen to be going in the wrong direction? Apparently the authorities concerned with the preparation and prosecution of the case against Campbell were willing to permit a jury to convict him on the sole testimony of a ballistics expert, in the face of proof that he could not have committed the crime.

The temptation of police and prosecuting officers to "fasten" a crime upon an accused person, once the process has gone so far as to commit the authorities to the theory of his guilt, has been demonstrated in many criminal cases, but rarely has it been so completely exposed as in the Campbell case. The prosecution, if it prepared its case thoroughly, must have known that Campbell's alibi was impregnable. If it did not know this it failed to perform its full duty in investigating before prosecuting. Under the legal presumption of innocence an accused person is entitled to expect from public prosecutors a fair and thorough inquiry into all the circumstances indicating his connection with crime, in order that innocence may be shielded as surely as guilt is punished.

American criminal jurisprudence fails to do justice to an innocent individual subjected to trial for his life. He is morally entitled to reimbursement for all expenses incurred. The law should provide for satisfaction of this moral right. An innocent person may be financially ruined by a trial pressed by mistaken public prosecutors, who draw liberally upon public funds and risk none of their own money in a gamble with a human life as the stake.

The next time an individual is under investigation as the possible murderer of Mary Baker, the authorities should at least inquire into the possibility of his having been present at the scene of the crime.

CONSTRUCTION OF DIRIGIBLES.

By a coincidence, on the day that the Navy Department announced that it would ask for $1,500,000 to begin construction of the second of the proposed superdirigibles the British court of inquiry into the causes of the disaster that befell the R-101 got down to business. There is a feeling that the findings of the court of inquiry may affect the future of the dirigible not only in Great Britain but in the United States.

The British inquiry asks an answer to two questions: namely, was the R-101 faulty in construction and design, and was she prepared for such an ambitious undertaking as a flight to India? It has been brought out by various witnesses that the engines were several tons overweight; that there is a possibility that control wires may have parted; that the barometers may have registered incorrectly, and that the ship had been flown in only one comparatively short and unsatisfactory test. If this testimony should be substantiated it may be held that the R-101 was both faulty in construction and unready for a long flight. But the primary cause of the disaster is not shrouded in mystery. The R-101 was inflated with hydrogen. Had she been inflated with helium the terrible tragedy of Beauvais might not have occurred.

The dirigible is not on trial in this inquiry, but rather the British policy of using hydrogen. This fact seems to be recognized by at least one member of the court and by the British press. Col. Moore-Brabazon, one of the members of the board, says that the disaster "has not shaken our faith in the future use of aircraft. We may lose valuable lives, but I am sure we are not going to be frightened by catastrophe, however lamentable and distressing." The new statesman asserts that "the crash at Beauvais should not teach us that there should be no more airships, but that there must be better airships. Research and testing must go on. There are other and worse ways of risking life than in flying."

The Navy's request for an appropriation to begin the construction of the ZRS-5 indicates that a similar sentiment prevails officially in this country. The contract for construction of the ZRS-4, now so far advanced that it probably will be in the air early in 1931, and the ZRS-5 provides that the order for the latter may be canceled upon the payment of a premium for the construction of the former. If both ships are constructed they will cost approximately $4,000,000 each. A single ship would cost nearly $6,000,000. Aside from the saving involved in going through with both orders, and the indirect national advantage that will accrue from the establishment of a dirigible airship industry in the United States, it is advantageous in behalf of naval war trials to have two ships available, one for the attacking force and the other for the defense.

Following the Shenandoah disaster in 1926 the House naval affairs committee said: "We feel that the least that should be done in this field is to provide for two rigid airships of approximately 6,000,000 cubic feet each, to be used as adjuncts to the fleet. It is believed that the construction of the two rigid ships will go far toward building up in this country an airship industry which, when it is established on a sound basis, will be in a position to carry forward the development of airships." In view of the recommendation of this committee, the Navy should be encouraged in carrying forward in full measure the construction program now under way at Akron.

UNIVERSITY OF UTOPIA.

Dr. Robert M. Hutchins, the young man who was made president of the University of Chicago last year, has plans for a "University of Utopia." He would abolish about everything that makes life miserable for undergraduates today. Presumably students would be left to romance through college, partaking only of such tidbits of literature, science and philosophy that struck their fancy. Their education would not be cut up into disagreeable hours and units, but they would go joyfully on through the curricula until they became educated.

Unfortunately the scheme seems to hinge upon a spectacular performance on the part of college faculties. Under Dr. Hutchins' plan faculties would be charged with the responsibility of discovering what higher education is and with administering it. In view of this fact there seems to be no occasion for modern students to waste their time finding out the tuition fees.

Students would be allowed to enter this mythical institution when they became capable of convincing the authorities of their worthiness. Attendance at high school would not be required. It would not be so simple, however, to get out of the University of Utopia. A student would be expected to remain until some one decided that he was educated, regardless of what courses he had taken or how long he had attended.

That brings up another question: When is a man or woman educated? Does Dr. Hutchins have a yardstick that he can apply to learning in the aggregate? Pending the answer to this question and that enigma assumed that universities will have to limp along in their old custom-ridden routine.

THE PINKERTONS

From the London Times.

Not only because he was a detective, and because detectives are the most popular heroes of the day, does the death of Mr. Allan Pinkerton call for sympathetic notice. When his country came into the war Mr. Pinkerton gave up his great career to join the Army; and, although during most of his service he was in charge of the criminal investigation section of the provost marshal general's department, with headquarters in Paris, it is from the effects of being "gassed" that he has died at the early age of 54. We are not informed whether there is a Pinkerton to succeed him; but it would be sad if so queer a thing as a hereditary detective business (which would be impossible without hereditary detective talent) should fail for lack of heirs. Mr. Pinkerton was in the second generation from the founder of the firm. The original Allan Pinkerton fled from Glasgow to Canada to escape the consequences of his Chartist activities; left Canada for the United States; helped escaping slaves to freedom; tracked and caught counterfeit coiners and horse thieves and railway thieves; discovered a plot against the life of Abraham Lincoln; commanded his secret service through the Civil War; and ended by being almost as much consulted by the bankers, lawyers, companies and wealthy men of Great Britain and France as he was by those of his own country. When he died, in 1884, he had founded the Pinkerton detective agency and had trained two sons to take charge of it.

The bishops, professors, headmasters, and other moderate persons whose light reading is confined to three or four detective stories a week—the confirmed or "chain" readers must be left to themselves as incapable of reflection—may find occasion in unoccupied moments to ponder on this Pinkerton business, this Pinkerton's Academy for young detectives. Is it possible that the foundation of detective work (as of most other sorts of work) is, in the end, only pertinacity, patience, alertness, and other such commonplace qualities? Is it possible that in his latest novel, "The Dean's Elbow," Mr. A. E. W. Mason has drawn a detective on the lines of general truth; a clever man in his way, full of tricks and dodges, but in other ways a dull dog with no spark of imagination? The fellow is as commonplace as could be; but he goes ahead like a tank, and by pure pertinacity within the recognized lines of his profession he discovers the culprit. It is no disparagement to the genius of the first Allan Pinkerton or to the sterling ability of his successors to find such a detective as that rather a comfort for a change. Sherlock Holmes is sacred. His dressing-gown, his violin, his tobacco, his face, his treatment of Dr. Watson are imperishable attributes, entitling this airy being, this Puck of Baker street, to make a laughing stock of the flat-footed, large footed, heavy footed methods of "the Yard." But to Sherlock Holmes is due a supremacy which not every whippersnapper of a private detective may assume for his own. If the truth were told, it would probably reveal that in the methods of Pinkerton's there is a good deal more of "the Yard" than of the flashing inspiration of genius which is common in the story books. Payment at so much a day, and never by results; fixed salaries for all employes—such rules as these of Pinkerton's show a reassuring sagacity. They suggest the good sense, the strict attention to business, and —most important of all—the rigid probity for which Pinkerton's is known all the world over. Let the story writers spin their yarns, and welcome; it will be a satisfaction to those who have detective work to be done that the real thing goes on in its steady, patient way, based on a respectable tradition and sensational only in the marvelous results which its regular methods achieve.

MARKETING AMERICAN ART.

"Nowhere," said Henri Matisse in an interview the other day, "is so much encouragement, help and sympathy given to artists as in America." And there is undoubtedly much truth in that statement from the point of view of the Henri Matisses, says the Kansas City Star. Foreign artists, particularly if they happen to be fashionable, have small ground for complaint of their treatment in this country. But American artists tell another story. They seem to feel on the whole that they are neglected and misunderstood. In Kansas City, for example, the artists contend that there is practically no local market for their work.

If such is the case, however, some of the responsibility rests with the artists themselves. They possess one great natural advantage over foreign artists insofar as the American public is concerned. They are working in America. The normal person tends to prize the element of familiarity in art. He is inevitably interested in the things about him. American artists have made little use of that fact. What effort they have made to interpret the American scene has been for the most part unimpressive. A vigorous national school of art in this country would develop a popular market where foreign competition would be badly handicapped.

JUST FOLKS

THE COMFORTER.

One came to me when love was dead,
"Be brave, be brave," was all he said.

Another whispered: "Bear the blow,
It must be wisely ordered so."

Still came a third whose thought was this:
"Be worthy of the one you miss!

"Hold fast, althought your heart may break
And hide your grief for his dear sake!"

Then came a woman old who said:
"I wept for mine when he lay dead.

"Let fall your tears. It's right you should.
Come cry with me, 'twill do you good."

Of all who came with comfort nigh,
I liked her best who let me cry.

With Winter Comes the Regret That We Spent Too Little Time Among Flowers.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

WHEN a man who has buried one wife marries another and does all he can to make life pleasant for her, superficial critics say to one another: "A man always treats his second wife better than the first because she is younger. The one who wore herself out helping him through his early struggles was merely a work horse, appreciated little and loved less, and the new one is a petted darling who reaps where she didn't sow. How heartless men are!"

Yet as a rule the man who treats his second wife better than he treated the first is actuated by remorse.

Doubtless he loves the second and would be good to her in any case, but many of the attentions she receives are prompted by the man's regret that he so often did less than he could to lighten the burdens and add to the joys of the first.

Without analyzing his motives or being aware of them, he buys one woman too much because he bought the other too little—is too much dominated by one because his sore heart repents of having too much dominated the other.

A similar reaction follows every death in a household capable of repentance.

When one member of a family dies, the ones that remain are more thoughtful and less selfish in their treatment of one another. The loss of one treasure teaches them to appreciate others more, but a portion of their new kindness is a fruitless effort to undo the past.

Father or mother, brother or sister, son or daughter—no matter—those who live on are saddened by a thousand regrets—cruelly hurt by the memory of unkind words spoken, words of appreciation left unsaid, selfish contentions for rights and advantages that now seem trivial and shameful.

It is a common human experience escaped by none except the brutal and the stupidly complacent.

How little credit it does to our intelligence!

The first proof of a feeble mind is inability to foresee the consequence of a simple act.

Surely we give little proof of intelligence when we do and say unkind things that will bring us bitter memories as surely as night follows day.

We have such a little while together, and all the things that prompt our unkindness seem so worthless when death stalks through the house.

How much sweeter life would be if we had the wit to treat one another as we would if this were our last day together.

Various Aspects of Political Issues Discussed by the Press.

Minneapolis Journal.

Ways may yet be found of cutting down the size of Congress. A Detroit statesman suggests that candidates for Congress be required to pass intelligence tests.

Counterfeit Government.

Detroit News.

We haven't too much government in this country. We simply have too much of what is called government, but isn't.

There's the Rub.

Springfield Republican.

The business slump can not be removed by a vote, says Mr. Morrow. The fact, however, that is worrying his party is that it can influence votes.

History Never Repeats.

Obviously Dwight W. Morrow does not expect any "I-do-not-choose-to-run" statement from President Hoover.

Who Wants to Carry Water?

Any congressional candidate who tries to carry water on both shoulders in the forthcoming campaign may have to send his leaky suitcase to the dry cleaner.

Then and Now.

Milwaukee Journal.

Two years ago the G. O. P. was winning States in the Solid South. This year it is working hard to hold rock-ribbed Republican Pennsylvania.

Chesterfieldian.

Detroit News.

J. Ham Lewis didn't say flatly that he would finish ahead in November. What he said was, "I find it embarrassing to have two charming ladies running after me."

Neglecting to Vote.

New York Times.

There is no more reason for a citizen's being paid to go to the polls than there is for a Christian's being paid to go to church. If he accepts American institutions, there is no question of his duty. In Utopia all good citizens would rush to the polls. In America only half of them find their way there, by no means all unassisted. Some countries fine non-voters. That kind of lash would not appeal to Americans. But one could conceive of a commonwealth, even short of Utopia, where men who did not choose to use their legs might at least furnish their own Fords, and where farmers would not sit in rows on the fence opposite the polling place—as they sometimes used to do in up-State New York—waiting to be paid to do their duty.

Not Red Hot Yet.

Minneapolis Journal.

Judge Maxey, candidate for justice of the highest court of Pennsylvania, says of an opponent: "I suppose I should say nothing about that blatant ass and mental tomtit. Wherever this bombastic blatherskite is known, his opposition is welcomed and his support is dreaded and avoided." The campaign in Penn's Woods is warming up toward its close.

In Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

It should be clear to Pennsylvania Republicans by this time that the fight for governor is not, in fact, an attack upon the Republican party in this State or in the Nation. Of the thousands of campaign speeches, statements and broadcasts very few have dealt with issues directly affecting the Republican party in the Nation or the Hoover administration.

The battle between Mr. Pinchot and Mr. Hemphill, so far as Pennsylvania is concerned, is a State fight. That is plain to any one who looks around for some of the old and familiar political landmarks.

There are many Republicans in Pennsylvania who regard their support of the congressional candidates as the actual test of their party loyalty. For that reason they are determined to send Secretary Davis to the Senate and support Mr. Hoover in the House with a normal delegation of Republican members. The anti-Pinchot Republicans regard themselves as better party men than Mr. Pinchot any day in the year and they are not worried by the thought of a Democrat in the mansion overlooking the Susquehanna.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Democrat Hopes for Success in 1932, But Sees No Jacksonian of National Stature.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Since I was old enough to take notice I have seen two Democrats elevated to the White House, and at one time I did think I might live to see a third elected. But I have about given up the hope.

I will be pleased if we elect a Democratic Congress this year, and, of course, I will be delighted if we follow that up by electing a Democrat to the Presidency in 1932. Probably we could do so if there was any Jacksonian candidate in sight able to inject a little statesmanship into his politics, local or otherwise. I mean a real leader with enough ordinary common sense to do a little thinking for himself without worrying too much about how the dogs drink.

In which connection please remember that the two Presidents Democracy has managed to elect in the last 75 years were not afraid to take a chance on the straight-from-the-shoulder expression of their opinions in office or out.

Do not fool yourself with the idea that I am a screheaded grodch. I am too good a Democrat for that. But I do think that an upstanding Democratic President like Cleveland or Wilson in the White House just now would be a good thing for the country.

In addition to which my observation of our national development indicates that good times will return without regard to what side wins this year, wet or dry, Democrat or Republican.

Yet, all the same, I must admit that there is nothing specially cheerful in the realization that, while Democratic Congresses are apt at any time to throw a scare into the Republican ranks, Democratic Presidents are being elected at the rate of something less than three in 100 years.

HICKORY.

Maj. Gen. Fries Suggests Building of Parking Spaces Under Public Parks.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In this morning's news there was given a proposal by a prominent citizen of Boston to spend $1,000,000,000 on the immediate improvement of the Mississippi River and its tributaries for flood control, power and irrigation.

Work of that nature requires too much machinery and is too concentrated, besides requiring extensive engineering investigations and plans before work can begin to be ready in time to have any effect upon the unemployment situation for a year.

There is one thing, however, that can be done in the District of Columbia, every State, city, county and village; that is, build more and wider roads and parking spaces. The question at once arises, Where shall the parking spaces be built? Build them under the city parks. The parks can be left exactly as they are today, and one, two or more stories for automobiles can be built underneath. Such work would be as widely distributed as unemployment, and could begin within 30 days in every hamlet in the United States. A moderate fee for parking space would not only pay for the operation, but at least interest on the cost, and if made a little larger in time pay the entire cost of improvement.

Westerner Thinks Muscle Shoals Ought to Be Borne in Mind as Aid to Employment and Prosperity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: As one sure means of lessening materially the present unemployment situation and of promoting prosperity among farmers and mechanics, one might surely call attention to the great government plant at Muscle Shoals. With the huge Wilson Dam to provide power, the unequaled mineral resources of the surrounding country, the splendid rail and water transportation, and the fine and equable climate, it would seem that nothing is wanting there necessary to provide homes and wages for a half million people.

Why should such a wonderful boon lie neglected by a virile people like Americans? GEORGE FINDLAY.

Veteran Suggests Way to Help the "Buy Now" Campaign.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I am glad that you favor the payment of adjusted service certificates, as 90 per cent of the boys need compensation now and not in 1945 or later, when thousands of them will be in their graves.

To aid the "Buy Now" campaign, why not advance the boys their money on their certificates, and thus enable the less fortunate of them to have overcoats and shoes this winter, and to withdraw from the bread lines? I hope that you will continue the good work, and I know that most of the former service men are backing you in your efforts to effect payment of these certificates. A VETERAN.

The President's Cabinet.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "The country placed President Hoover in the White House to carry into effect the platform of the Republican party." These words are taken from The Post of October 31.

It is my opinion that every President is obliged to uphold the Constitution of the United States. Are not the members of his Cabinet in sympathy with his views on prohibition?

Why do they go out of their way to speak for wet candidates?

The President is able to choose his own Cabinet, isn't he?

JUNE HARVEY.

Says "Regulation" Could Not Be Enforced Any Better Than Prohibition, If as Well.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Please let me commend you heartily for your recent editorial on "After Repeal, What?" This country has tried every conceivable method of regulation and finds that none of them can be any better enforced than prohibition, if as well. Let's stand firmly for prohibition and enforce it.

EVENTS OF INTEREST IN SOCIETY CIRCLES OF CAPITAL

Mrs. Mitchell Engages Niece As Secretary

Gertrude Bancroft, of St. Paul, Recruit in Capital Society.

A NIECE of the Attorney General and Mrs. William D. Mitchell, Miss Gertrude Bancroft, of St. Paul, Minn., is the most recent recruit in the younger set of the Capital. She will spend the winter in Washington with her aunt and uncle, acting as social secretary to Mrs. Mitchell when official entertaining begins.

Miss Bancroft will doubtless take part in the festivities to be given by Capital debs and other members of the young set, and at the same time find the secretarial work entirely congenial. Other girls have assumed such duties for prominent hostesses here, and found that their work fits in beautifully with any social activities which they wish to pursue.

For example, there is Miss Caroline Willcox, daughter of Mrs. Charles Willcox, who is acting as social secretary for Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the Secretary of War. She took the position about a year ago. Miss Willcox made her debut here several seasons past, and like many others who have had their "whirl," decided to take up some sort of work.

Miss Rebecca Wellington, daughter of Mrs. John R. Wellington also finds "part time" work interesting. She is social secretary for Frau von Prittwitz, wife of the German Ambassador, having acted in this capacity for four or five years. She took the place of Miss Anita Henry, now Frau von Selzam, who, after adding the charm of her presence to most of the parties given by members of the diplomatic set, ended by marrying Herr von Selzam, who served at the embassy at the same time she did as secretary.

Then there is Mrs. Jack Tate who was secretary at the Turkish Embassy for some time. However, she gave the work up last year, finding that the duties of her home after marriage were as much as she could handle successfully.

Marjorie C. Ruckman Returns From New York.

Miss Majorie Campbell Ruckman, daughter of the late Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Ruckman, has returned to Washington and is residing at the Dodge Hotel. She has spent several years in New York pursuing her studies in fine arts and the languages at Columbia University.

Mrs. Charles F. Consaul, of 1651 Harvard terrace, has returned after a visit of two weeks with her sister, Mrs. John Howard McElroy, in Chicago.

Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Lewis N. Moeller, U. S. N., have arrived from Key West, Fla., and are spending a few days at the Martinique en route to New York, accompanied by Mrs. Moeller's mother, Mrs. Adele S. Gering, and their children, Priscilla and Griswold Moeller.

A new attache is being welcomed at the British Embassy. He is Mr. Mark Watson, a bachelor, who has come direct from London for duty in Washington.

Mr. Arthur J. Pack, Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy, and Mrs. Pack, who have been honeymooning in England since their marriage last summer, are now on the way home, due to land early this week. On their return they will be at 2336 Massachusetts avenue. Before her marriage Mrs. Pack was Miss Betty Thorpe. She is the daughter of Col. and Mrs. George C. Thorpe, of Washington.

Miss Josephine E. Hawks, of New York, is a guest of the Martinique, where she plans to spend several months.

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Henry G. Sharpe, U. S. A., have arrived from Bath, N. Y., where they spent the summer. They have taken possession of their suite at the Martinique, where they plan to remain for the winter.

Horse Show Will Attract Capital Group

Diplomatic Set Will Be Represented During New York Event.

The National Horse Show, which will be held at Madison Square Garden, in New York, opening Thursday and continuing for a week, will be viewed during that time by a large group from the diplomatic set.

With entries from Germany, the Irish Free State, Hungary, Sweden and Canada, the National Horse Show would naturally be of interest to the sport devotees among the foreign representatives in Washington.

Among those planning to attend, representing their respective countries, are the following: From the German Embassy, the counselor, Dr. Otto C. Kiep; the First Secretary and Frau Leitner; Herr Emil L. Baer, Herr Johann G. Lohmann and Frau Lohmann and Herr Alexander von Wuthenau.

Sweden, Baron Johan Beck-Friis, Mr. R. R. Bagge; Hungary, Mr. Nicholas de Vegh, Baron Paul Schell; Irish Free State, Mr. William J. B. Macaulay; Canada, Mr. Hume Wrong and Mrs. Wrong; Mr. Merchant Mahoney, Mr. Thomas Archibald Stone and Mrs. Stone, Mr. Keith Crother and Mrs. Crowther.

Gen. Ely will represent the United States.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederic A. Delano are spending a short while in New York, where they are staying at the Gladstone.

Mr. Heckscher At Wedding of Granddaughter

Philip Hofer Takes Bride at St. Bartholomew's, in New York City.

Of interest to smart circles throughout the East is the marriage of Miss Frances Heckscher, daughter of Mrs. Vanderhoef Heckscher, of New York and Glen Cove, Long Island, to Mr. Philip Hofer, son of Mrs. Charles Hofer, of New York, which took place Saturday in the chapel of St. Bartholomew's Church.

Mr. Myron Hofer, of Washington, acted as best man for his brother. He has made his home here for several seasons, at 2017 P street, formerly the residence of Mrs. Borden Harriman.

A large reception following the ceremony was held at the Park Lane, where Mr. Hofer and his bride received their guests before a bower of white chrysanthemums and ferns.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her grandfather, Mr. August Heckscher, wore her mother's wedding gown of Alencon lace with a train of chiffon velvet flowing from the waist. Her veil of tulle was fastened to a cap of lace, and she carried a white prayer book.

Miss Nancy Heckscher, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. She wore a gown of powder blue chiffon velvet, small velvet hat to match, and carried a sheaf of yellow calla lilies. She was the only attendant.

The bride's father is Mr. G. Maurice Heckscher, and she is the granddaughter of Mr. Harman B. Vanderhoef, of Greenwich, Conn. She attended Miss Chapin's School, in New York, and the Fermata School, at Aiken, S. C. She was introduced to society in 1928 and is a member of the Junior League.

Mr. Hofer is a graduate of Harvard, class of '21. He is a member of the Delphic, S. K., Phoenix, Signet and Hasty Pudding Clubs, of Harvard, and of the Union Club and the Grolier Society, in New York.

After a trip to Aiken, and later to Italy, Mr. Hofer and his bride will live at 14 East Ninetieth street, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer Stopping at Ritz-Carlton.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer went to New York yesterday for a brief visit. They are staying at the Ritz-Carlton.

Mrs. Buchanan Merryman, who has been visiting in London, will sail for this country November 8, reaching Washington about November 18.

Before leaving England Mrs. Merryman will visit her nephew and niece, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Simpson. She has been abroad since the early summer and spent some time traveling on the continent.

The Beta Chapter of the Phi Delta Gamma, graduate sorority for professional women, will hold its third annual tea for all graduate women students of George Washington University on November 12 and 13 from 4 to 6 o'clock in the women's rooms of George Washington University at 2009 G street northwest. All graduate women students at the university are invited to attend. Miss Margaret Klein will be assisted by the Misses Clyde Roberts, Camille DuBose and Nina Booth as hostesses.

The mattress which Zaban will make out of your old one will be so buoyant—so comfortable—that you'll never want to sleep on a flattened one again. You'll wake up refreshed, invigorated by nerve-relaxing sleep.
For when remade the Zaban way, a mattress is as clean—germ-free—buoyant and beautiful as when first bought. To prove this you need only to visit our factory and showrooms and see them "before" and "after."
Thousands of mattresses from Washington's most beautifully furnished homes have been sent here. Many are having the new type of cushion spring put in. The result is that scores of resilient springs, covered with layers of downy felt, cushion every curve of the body. A cushion spring or a spring mattress is the nearest thing to floating thru the air that one can ever experience.
Such mattresses cost $30 to $44, but Zaban makes and sells them for $29.50, or you can have them made out of your old used ones for $12.50 to $22.50—about half of what they cost elsewhere.
No matter where you purchase furniture, you save if you buy beds and bedding here. For example: Good box springs usually cost about $50.00. We make them to order to fit your bed for only $25.00 . . . the finest type with rustless, squeakless springs. Pillows, too, are made to order and sold to you at wholesale prices.
Phone National 9410 and have us call for your mattress or visit our factory and showroom, 903 E St. N.W.

IN view of the nearness of the elections and the approach of a Congressional session, it appears, more than a coincidence that the Radio Commissioners should start falling over each other in proposing that a more equitable distribution of broadcasting facilities should be effected... Especially, when one recalls that this inequality has been in existence several years.

Following a statement by Chairman Baltzman that the overquota areas should be reduced and the underquota sections added to, Commissioners Starbuck, Lafount and Robinson offered plans for better enforcement of the Davis amendment.

Mr. Starbuck would reduce the overquota zones and States and increase the facilitels of the underquota areas, while Mr. Lafount's particular grievance is to obtain a more equitable distribution between the extreme eastern zone and the west coast zone.

A new series of morning programs entitled "Daily Food News" will be inaugurated over an extensive network this morning (WRC—9:45 a. m.) It will be sponsored by the Great Atlantic & Pacific Tea Co., and will be in addition to the regular Monday night A. & P. Gypsies.

The American Dickens League, formed to perpetuate the work of Charles Dickens, will present its founder, Mortimer Kaphan, portrayer of Dickens' characters, this afternoon (WMAL—5 p. m.).

ONE could not help thinking, listening to the WBAL fifth anniversary program Saturday night, what city outside of New York could produce a finer array of talent than Baltimore did on this occasion? Frequently these station celebrations, which begin around midnight, are mostly whoopee and either thin out or get rough in the wee small hours. The WBAL program seemed to get better and better.

Introduced by a medley of old Southern airs, the atmosphere of Maryland's hospitable city was so admirably conveyed that one could almost smell the steaming terrapin. Referring to the musical standard of the station, which is probably the highest maintained by any independent station in the United States, due to its director, Frederick R. Huber, being also supervisor of music for the City of Baltimore, some one remarked, "While WBAL has not entirely been nurtured on classics, it has had a proper bringing up."

This was apparent from the program Saturday night as it included something for every musical taste, the selections never going too high or too low. No Bach fugues were attempted and jazz was conspicuous by its absence.

Nor did our jubilant neighbors overlook the opportunity to put in the usual boost for their old home town.

"Baltimore must always be on the map in a radio sense," Charles M. Cohn, vice president of the Consolidated Gas & Electric Co., owners of the station, declared, "and WBAL is doing its utmost to keep it there!"

Mr. Cohn told of the station's applicatoin for 50,000 watts power.

The granting of this request by the Radio Commission would surely be a lucky break for Washington if it served to bring in more clearly all-star performances such as WBAL gave Saturday night.

HERE for the week-end, Bond Geddes, executive vice president of the Radio Manufacturers Association, who still maintains his home at 20 Grafton street, Chevy Chase, almost fell out of his shoes Saturday morning when the telephone operator told him there was a call for him from the S. S. Leviathan, then about half way across the Atlantic headed for New York.

It was from Capt. William G. Sparks, wealthy radio manufacturer of Jackson, Mich., returning from Europe. Capt. Sparks had felt the urge to discuss plans for a meeting of the Radio Manufacturers Association in Cleveland postponed to November 18 so he could attend.

The time contributed by Columbia to the Republican and Democratic parties in the campaign just closing, according to Harry C. Butcher, would have cost them $62,400. In addition to the donation of time to Senator Norris Saturday night Columbia bore nearly $1,000 expense in picking up the senator's address from Omaha.

ON ONE occasion—and on one occasion only—George Beuchler, WABC announcer, entertained the radio audience with a piano solo. His piano solo came, he recalls, three years ago when he was working as an announcer at WRC in Washington.

An emergency arose. He was called upon. With no music at hand, all he could think of was "Yes, We Have No Bananas." He played the verse twice and the chorus four times before aid arrived. They say he hasn't played the piano since.

Art Interprets the Mode

A charming ensemble from Ardanse consists of a beige and brown Chanel jersey dress and coat, with a scattered brown and green trimming, and a green belt on the dress.

New York, Nov. 2.

YOU'VE probably heard of Chanel jersey, and perhaps, if you are not familiar with the trade in some way, wondered what Chanel jersey was. Well, this is the story: This famous couturiere has always been very fond of jersey, using it extensively for sportswear, and street wear, and sometimes even cleverly developing it in a way to make it suitable for quite dressy afternoon wear.

But the jerseys procurable from the fabric mills did not always suit madame, who is a most exacting person, and who, having a reputation to maintain, can well afford to be. So she had her mills experiment with a kind of jersey she would be satisfied to use in her creations, a jersey that would retain all of the flattering softness and beauty of any known jersey without any of its bad points. Its bad points, meaning only its propensity for stretching, since jersey seldom fades or wears out before it stretches out.

When a jersey was finally developed that retained all of its suppleness yet did not stretch, Chanel not only used it for her own models, but put it on the market and sold it as "Chanel jersey," for quite a terrific price in jersey language—yet a price that people were quite willing to pay in order to get the qualities in this material that this jersey undoubtedly has. Thus, we have Chanel jersey!

And many of the other couturieres are using this splendid material in their models, appropriately priced to include the extra price of the Chanel jersey. Thus Ardanse has selected a cloth in beige and brown for her charming ensemble that I have illustrated for you today. The coat and the dress are appropriately trimmed with green and brown, and the dress then has a green leather belt. Ardanse is one of the Haute Couture who makes to perfection this particular kind of an ensemble which is suitable for sportswear or the street.

O-o-o-o-o-h, it's going to be cozy indoors this fall, with a little tea table drawn up before a blazing hearth, and fragrant jasmine tea and friendly gossip making you forget the dreariness outside! Honestly now, afternoon tea is the way to entertain these days, and everybody loves it if all the accessories make a pleasing and harmonious picture. And the styles in table covers and napkins have changed just as drastically as our own dresses. The Dare Department of The Washington Post has a leaflet for you, showing the newest and gayety cloths and napkins, and is just waiting for your stamped, self addressed envelope to let you in on the latest tea-set secrets!

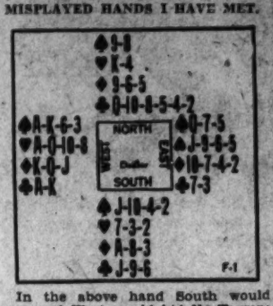
WORK ON BRIDGE

MISPLAYED HANDS I HAVE MET.



In the above hand South would pass and West would bid No Trump; one in Auction Bridge, three in Contract Bridge, and would obtain the contract without competition.

The hand was played at Contract Bridge and North, of course, led a Club. West won and put dummy in with a Spade. The Jack of Hearts then was led for a finesse, but it lost to North who led a second Club. When West won that trick, it established the Clubs in the North hand.

The Declarer now cashed three good Hearts and attempted to cash three more Spades, but was unable to do so as South had command of the suit after the lead of the Ace and King. The Declarer next led the King of Diamonds, but South won and that ended Declarer's trick-taking. South had the best Spade but that was superfluous as South had a Club to put North in to make his established Clubs. The Declarer consequently took three Spades, three Hearts and two Clubs, and then bit the dust.

Do you see West's mistake?

THE CORRECT PLAY.

When West won the first Club trick, he should have seen that he could assure himself of game without trying the Heart finesse by winning three Spades, one Heart, three Diamonds and two Clubs. This he could do without difficulty if he led a Diamond to trick 2 as he had four in sequence to the King and was sure to make three of them. When the Diamond was won by South, the Club returned and the four remaining Clubs in North's hand made good. Declarer would make the above named tricks without taking the unnecessary chance of a finesse in Hearts.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"SCORPIO."

IF November 3 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m. to 9:15 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m. and from 7 p. m. to 8 p. m. The danger periods are from 11 p. m. to noon, and from 10 p. m. to 11:30 p. m.

Fate will not leave you to yourself on this date, and she has promised to help to fill your cup with happiness and to swell your coffers. A cloud darkens your pathway, but it will have the proverbial silver lining. Good for travel and marriage.

The child born on this November 3 will have an anxious nature, and will desire to please the world. It will be conscientious, sincere and sympathetic. It will be a little timid about asking for its just deserts, and will be too easily crushed by adverse circumstances.

You have a very "touchy" nature, and you inconvenience and often irritate your friends by compelling them to handle you with gloves. Your sensitiveness and irascibility is due to your extreme self-consciousness, and you imagine the eyes of the world are focused on you and that poisoned darts are aimed at you, when they are not. Although you expect a delicate touch and a gentle tongue from others, you do not reciprocate in this respect, and you are rather brutal, especially in the bluntness of your speech.

It is very difficult for you to place yourself in the other fellow's boots, and you cast judgment without a fair jury and trial. When all is well, you are an entertaining, cheerful commore than the average being. You panion, and you seem to enjoy life are either up in the clouds or completely in the dumps, and it seems difficult for you to navigate along a peaceful level. Your work is much affected by your moods and emotions, and you cannot be depended upon to maintain your "can be" efficiency. It is difficult for you to admit your own faults, and you go on blaming circumstances and innocent bystanders, when the trouble begins at home. You have the ability to make friends but you cannot hold them, because of your temperament. You want to be loved, and people do love your best self. Strive to conquer your weaknesses, and you will find yourself a popular and much sought after being.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Is It Love?

AT no time in the history of the race has there been such analysis, discussion and questioning of the normal and natural phenomenon known as love. Everybody has a theory at least if not a psychosis on the subject. Why all the advertising? Love has been in the business now for quite a while and doing right well, at that. Why the sudden pressagenting for the enterprise? No one on earth can ever explain love, no one on earth can ever understand love. Yet every normal person on earth at some time or other for greater or less period of time experiences it. Why not take it as we take food, rest, sleep and other natural occurrences. No one ever goes about asking "Should-I-go-to-sleep-will-I-regret-it-if-I-do?" People get sleepy and they sleep. Because that is what people have been doing since time began. Folks have been known to go to sleep and not wake up. Perhaps if they had known that was going to happen they might have done a lot of worrying about the matter. But worry or no worry they could not hope to stay awake forever. Such a thing would be against nature.

Well, it is about the same with love. Suppose it does turn out to be less than the soft music promised? Suppose it does prove that the worst that was ever said about it in an alimony jail was none too severe. What of it?. It is natural for people to love. And it is natural for every active normal healthy human to want to be loved and to be willing to take a chance on what the experience may bring. Fearing and doubting and questioning are craven. The only way to live is to jump in and live. And that goes for Pete, whose wild ideas follow:

Dear Mrs. McDonald:

I have been reading your words of wisdom lately for the simple reason that I am seriously considernig marriage. However, there are quite a few things that I want cleared up first. If love is a natural thing, why does it cause most of the misery in the world?

If love is such a beneficial influence in a man's life why do most men dread the thought of it as they do?

If love is the thing that makes life sweet, what makes alimony jails? And how about sweet divorce?

If nature counted upon marriage as part of her plans why did she place so many obstacles along the way to that end?

If man was to be created the fool that he is where women are concerned, why were not women made all worthy of the poor deluded fool's confidence and devotion?

Has any one ever worked out a set of rules that can make marriage workable or livable?

If I seem flippant or cynical forgive me. My parents fought for twenty years. I never had one meal in peace. They each married again and now tell me all the devilries of which their new partners seem past masters. My father's wife has robbed him and dares him to bring her to court. My mother's husband is a polished loafer who considers her beneath him and tells her so. He lives on the alimony my father pays my mother, spending it well in advance of receipt. All of these four people loved. Will you, dear lady, tell me to what end?

I now feel that happiness for me depends upon the society of a certain fair and gracious creature. Is it love? And will she some day shrill at me across the breakfast table and assure me of my own worthlessness? She at present tells me that I am in her thoughts all day. Is that love? Can I depend upon it? Or can one depend upon anything? Except, of course, ultimate misery of one kind or another? Should I marry and invite ultimate misery in haste? Should I renounce love and languish in misery of less acute variety? What to do, fair prophet, what to do?

PETE.

If we were flippant we would say go languish and spare the woman, but being far from flippant we can only say "Go and live and take what living brings."

Uncle Sam's Home Hints

CREAMED DISHES AND GRAVIES.

(Bureau of Dairy Industry).

The foundation of creamed dishes is white sauce made of milk, butter, flour and seasonings. For a sauce of medium thickness the proportions are one cup of milk, two tablespoons butter and two tablespoons flour. These ingredients may be combined in several ways, but the following method is economical of time and utensils and yields a rich, smooth sauce: Blend the flour with the butter, which has been melted but not allowed to brown, add the milk carefully and stir the mixture constantly until it thickens and begins to boil. The sauce is then ready to combine with a cooked vegetable, such as cauliflower, diced potatoes or celery, with hard-cooked eggs or with chopped meat or fish. Adding grated cheese to the sauce for creamed dishes gives them richer flavor and greater food value. A rich cheese sauce of this kind poured over crisp toast makes a satisfactory lunch or supper dish, especially if served with a succulent vegetable.

Milk gravies are made in the same way as white sauce, except that drippings from meat are substituted for the butter.

WHEN PLANTS ARE INDOORS.

WHEN you took your plants into the house in September they were no doubt in splendid shape and you were delighted with them. The few summer months of fresh air and sunshine had done much for them. They had all developed some new foliage and the old foliage was what the florists term "self-sustaining," meaning that it did not require staking. You were justly proud of them, but by the middle of October you noticed a change; they were more or less dejected. You wondered why, for you knew how carefully you had been watering them.

Such a state of affairs is discouraging and now, the first week of November, instead of conditions improving they are becoming worse. From apparently nowhere insects are coming, not by ones and twos, but by droves, to aid in the final destruction of the plants. But things are never so bad that they might not be worse, so cheer up; the situation is far from hopeless.

Your plants are no doubt stunted, due to lack of moisture in the atmosphere and also to lack of fresh air. They have ceased to grow, and whenever a plant ceases to develop new growth it becomes the prey of some insect enemy. In its weakened condition it can not resist these enemies.

And now for some first-aid treatment. The first thing to do is to remove your plants to a cooler place, some room where the air can be frequently changed.

The red spider is usually the first insect to arrive in a group of sickly plants. This enemy is easily routed. Merely place the plant on its side in the laundry tub and get out your hand syringe, if you have one. If you haven't, carry the plant to the bathtub and turn on the shower. The water will literally drown the insects and a few such treatments will entirely rid the plant. Always, when spraying, see that the water reaches the under surface of the leaves, as this is the favorite haunt of these insects.

The second insect is usually the aphis, or green fly, and the third the mealy bug. These enemies can soon be chased away by a few applications of water, coal oil and soapsuds.

When your plants are once free from insects, keep them free. The only way to do this is by the persistent use of the daily shower, for clean plants kept in rooms that are flooded with light and where the air is pure, are seldom troubled by insects.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

PREVENTING DISEASE.

THE University of Illinois proves each year that communicable disease can be made a matter of trivial importance in a group of nearly fifteen thousand young people. If, at any time, the work of a school is disarranged by contagion, its classrooms are emptied, money is wasted, and students suffer or lose their lives from epidemic disease, it is not because there is lack of evidence that such effects are unnecessary as well as wasteful. In the large student body of this State institution, in the academic year 1929-30, there were but two cases of mumps, ten of scarlet fever, and two of smallpox. There was no measles, nor diphtheria, whooping cough, or scarlet fever.

Students gathered from everywhere, going home on visits, traveling back and forth, at times were thrown in contact with contagion and sometimes brought some back to the campus with them. When they did so there was no spreading. A total of 474 students were exposed to communicable diseases. Of this number 206 were allowed to attend classes.

The old style light quarantine, including the exclusion from school of all children exposed to contagion, is necessary where there is no modern health department and no school inspection. At that, it often fails to prevent epidemics. In places where there is a health service modified quarantine is safe. It is true it is easier to keep a university student body free of contagion than is the case with children in the grammar grades.

In the class of 1933 the following proportions of students have already had the forms of contagion noted, and second attacks are rare: Fifty-three and eight-tenths per cent had had chicken pox; 8.1 per cent, diphtheria; 7-10 of 1 per cent, infantile paralysis; 74.5 per cent, measles; 2-10 of 1 per cent, meningitis; 49.4 per cent, mumps; 13.9 per cent, scarlet fever; 4.1 per cent, smallpox; 3 per cent, typhoid fever; 51.7 per cent, whooping cough. Over 84 per cent had been vaccinated against typhoid fever, diphtheria or scarlet fever.

During the year 1,168 members of the entire student body were vaccinated against smallpox and 15,505 against typhoid fever. Not much vaccination against other diseases was done.

It has not been long since it was accepted as inevitable that disease would break out whenever 10,000 to 15,000 young people were brought together to make an army or for any other purpose. Soon after the coming together measles would break out and pneumonia would follow. After the weather had gotten colder smallpox would creep in. Along in the wet, cold days of March meningitis could be expected.

Things are better now.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood—Lupe, the whoopee girl, has calmed down like a whirlwind, suddenly tired and dizzy from too much spinning.

LUPE VELEZ.

For the first time in her short movie career of three years the little Velez girl is behaving as an actress should behave when she is working—but not because she is either tired or dizzy.

The reason is that Lupe is playing her greatest role, her first dramatic one, and probably the best she'll ever have. It is Katusha in Tolstoy's "Resurrection," the part that Lupe's countrywoman, the dignified Dolores del Rio, so successfully portrayed a few years ago.

More than one director has refused to try to handle Lupe. "That vixen Velez!" they exclaimed if they were alliterative. "Direct her? Never!"

There are directors who thought they could handle Lupe and make her behave, who believed they could prevent her from ruining serious scenes with her habit of looking cross-eyed at the cameraman or sticking out her tongue at a fellow player.

Good Girl.

After the director, Edwin Carewe, convinced Lupe she could be Katusha he made her promise to behave. He warned her that it would be a difficult role, one that would demand all her energy and thought.

And he probably reminded her that her work would be compared to that of Miss Del Rio. If he didn't, Lupe herself probably thought of that angle.

The change in the Mexican whirlwind's behavior was noticeable the day "Resurrection" was started. She pays close attention to Carewe's explanations, and between scenes she studies her lines.

No More Play.

The new Lupe says her director is responsible.

"Eddie," says she, referring to Carewe, "ees making Lupe work harder than she ever worked before, and I like myself better.

"No more of playing around. I'm too tired, and I have too much to theenk about. Et ees very deefficult part."

And as for marriage, now that she has "settled down," Lupe has this to say:

"Nevair will I marry. A woman who ees married is bowing to her hoosban' all the time and she can't have other frens. I doan like that."

And a few breaths later:

"Oh, how I weesh Garee (Cooper) would come back from that d—— location. Four weeks hees away, and Lupe is so onhappy."

CHAPTER XXIX.

Lady Gwendolen was sitting on the long stool in front of the many-mirrored dressing-table in the exquisite rose-satin adorned room which Lady Dorothy had assigned to her on her arrival several months before. She had come to look upon that room as home, and to have a rather sentimental fondness for it. But during the days since Lord Winston's death it seemed to her as if the very gay rose of the hangings had turned a smoky grey, even as life itself had lost its bright hues.

It was the morning following the explorer's visit to the Home Office in London. He and the police inspector had gone up to London that very morning. Her maid had brought Lady Gwendolen that news with her early tea. She had further told her mistress of some great excitement going on, which so far stimulated Lady Gwendolen's curiosity that at this moment she was asking herself as to the wisdom of seeking out Lady Dorothy and getting details of the developments.

Lady Gwendolen was pale and sad, but otherwise the same girl that Robin Smith had come to worship. She still had the independence and courage which had instinctively attracted him. During the days since the inquest she had been busy thinking * * * thinking * * * It seemed the thoughts would forever go round in circles and lead nowhere. But on the previous night, when she had begged off from dinner, her mind had been cleared. She had, of course, heard from Lady Dorothy about the discovery of initials on the fatal knife, and she had been sorely puzzled * * * for the reason that she knew her brother's knife had formerly belonged to a man named Pierre * * * his other name she had never heard, but certainly the initials "B. P." would not fit Pierre. Yet, if the knife was not Edward's, she asked herself again and again, whose was it, and how had one so similar to his own come to be in this house? How? How?

It was later, after she was in bed, that a clear light seemed to shine through the phantasmagoria of her thoughts, a light that pointed to her native country. She felt that somewhere there in those snow-covered hills and deep-wooded lakes was the key.

And this morning, as she sat before the mirror, she had the same thought. And she remembered the freedom and sweetness of her home, her heart cried out against the injustice which had locked up the poet. From the first she had thought him innocent and repented her thoughtless teasing of him in the past. She admired the way in which he conducted himself during the trying ordeal of the inquest, and his defiant yet sweet smile when the inspector led him away. It had cast a romantic glamour about him which made him seem very different from the awkward, ill-clothed poet whose fierce solemn reading his own verse had sent her into peals of laughter.

She had thought more often of him than she would have liked to admit. She was again thinking of him, and as she looked at the reflection in the mirror her black eyes for an instant had their old laughing gayety. It was gone almost before it had come, but in that instant she had determined to visit the poet in his prison. She couldn't have told why herself, but she felt impelled to see him; knew that she must go and see him.

A knock on her bedroom door disturbed her thoughts.

"It is only I, dear," came Lady Dorothy's voice. "May I come in?"

Lady Gwendolen jumped up to meet the older woman, who bent and kissed her affectionately.

Lady Gwendolen shook her head doubtfully. "That's what I don't know. That queer fellow, Willis Hanson, perhaps * * * a Canadian, or one who's lived in Canada almost surely. * * *"

"Why Canada, dearest?"

"That knife * * * it's such a broad, awkward knife * * * it would only be employed by some one used to Canada, and long accustomed to such weapons, or some primitive man * * * I feel sure. It would be so much more natural to use a revolver or something. * * *"

"But he might not have had a revolver, or might have been afraid of being heard," argued Lady Dorothy.

"But you must admit it is queer the man happened to have just the knife if he weren't Canadian. * * *"

"Don't worry your head about it, dear," advised Lady Dorothy, who was disturbed at the strained look in the young woman's face. "I engaged Linscott to attend to everything, and he's a capable man, I'm sure. And Mr. Armstrong has stayed on to help him * * * between them they're sure to find the guilty man and free my poor poet."

"Oh, yes," Lady Gwendolen began vaguely. "I was thinking about Mr. Smith." A sudden light broke over her face. "I know what it was. I'm going to visit him this morning!"

"Oh, Gwen, ought you? He's been found guilty of murdering your brother, you know. * * *"

"But he didn't do it! You know that! I'm going to prove to him that I believe him. It's really your fault he's in all this trouble. * * *"

"Oh, Gwen, I didn't think you'd throw that up to me!"

"Sorry, I didn't mean to hurt you, but you know you did give him an awful little room, and he's proud as Lucifer!" There was a little ring of pride in her voice which did not escape Lady Dorothy.

"The two men are off to London," she said at once. "They have gone to see Prince Pozolevsky. * * *"

"Surely they don't believe he killed Edward?"

"I'm afraid it looks that way," said Lady Dorothy, quietly. "But we mustn't allow ourselves to get excited. * * *"

"But it's so stupid of them!" Lady Gwendolen frowned. "I'm positive it was a Canadian. I'm going to tell the inspector as soon as he returns. It's certainly a Canadian knife, and I've been thinking over everything I know about Edward * * * you see, his being ten years older, and a man, and our being separated, means that it isn't much * * * and trying to imagine what and why. * * *"

"You have an idea of your own?"

"Nothing definite * * * but I'm almost sure the key to it all is to be found in Canada. * * *"

"You don't think Edward wronged any one? * * *"

"Oh, no!" was the indignant reply. "How dreadful to suggest such a thing! He was the best man who ever lived!" For some moments she couldn't control her voice.

"Forgive me, dear. I meant nothing. * * *"

"Oh, I know," Lady Gwendolen replied huskily. "It's just that I can't get used to the idea that he's gone forever * * * gone. But I don't intend to cry. He'd hate that!" She threw up her imperious little head bravely. "I mean to find the man that did it, and punish him!"

"Dear little Gwen," murmured Lady Dorothy, as she smothered the slim white hand which was clenched in her lap.

"I meant about Edward that he was so just and honest that sometimes it seemed hardness to people that didn't know him as I did. He might have known something about some one, something wicked, and been going to tell * * * for if he thought it was his duty he'd have been sure to tell. * * *"

"But what could he have known * * * and about whom?"

"I didn't know you were interested in him," she said.

Lady Gwendolen reddened, but she answered defiantly:

"Well, I am, very much interested. He's brave, if he is silly and romantic. And I was brought up to respect bravery."

"Of course, child; so was I," Lady Dorothy smiled good-naturedly. She had suddenly realized that she was jealous of Gwen's liking Robin and as suddenly ashamed of the momentarily undignified feeling. Lady Dorothy enjoyed championing the poet and being the sole champion—at least, being the sole woman champion—gave it an added piquancy.

"Will you come with me?" asked Lady Gwendolen. "You go down every morning and afternoon, don't you?"

"There've hardly been enough yet to say 'every!' I did go the afternoon of the inquest and twice yesterday, but if you go this morning I can send the books and flowers and things with you, and you can tell Mr. Smith I'll be along after lunch."

"I didn't suppose they allowed prisoners such comforts."

"I don't know much about it," replied Lady Dorothy. "Mr. Smith is the first prisoner I ever knew." She smiled.

"It's because every one likes you," said Lady Gwendolen. "You know every one, old and young, falls sooner or later!"

"You funny child! Run along now and see Robin. It's early for us, but I'll wager he hasn't slept all night!"

Lady Dorothy's guess was more correct than she would have liked to think. Not only hadn't Robin slept the previous night, but since he had been confined he had managed only snatches full of troubled nightmares, and these generally in the daytime and from sheer exhaustion. All night, in the intense quiet, by candle light, he would work. He had done 100 lines or more of a new poem which he knew was a big stride ahead. He didn't dare think of its future or whether it would ever see the light of day * * * he didn't dare look ahead at all for fear he would go mad. He lived from hour to hour, from minute to minute, sternly repressing any frightful fancies which clamored for entrance to his tired and excited brain. It was when he dozed that it was the worst. He would dream of being lost in crowds of men, all with faces like the twelve good men and true who had sat to decide his fate for two days before, and these crowds would grow denser and denser and he would be crushed and not be able to breathe, and beat against the pressing human beings for air, but they would just look at him and press closer until he would wake holding on to his throat and gasping. It was horrible!

YOUR NAME
What Does It Mean?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph. D.

The family name "Morrow" may be traced back to three different sources. In many cases it is of Celtic origin, and means "the son of the mariner" and "the son of the lord." It is also found as a purely English name, and as such its full significance is either "he who lives at the row of dwellings near the moor" or "he who lives at the corner of the moor." An English document of the year 1379 mentions a certain Willelmus de Morerawe and a Johannes Marowe.

The family name "Kidder" is the modern form of the Middle English "Kydere" which means "hawker" and "huckster." Its earliest meaning was "the one who carries a basket." An English document of the year 1379 mentions this name with the spellings "Kyder" and "Kydder."

The family name "Manger" is found with great frequency in the Hundred Rolls. Its Old English source is "mangere" which means "merchant" and "trader." This name, with the same meaning, is also rather common in Germany. Its Old High German source is "mangari."

The family name "Colt" (also spelled "Coult"), is of English origin. It was originally given as a nickname to persons who resembled a colt by their frisky, springy movements. Thirteenth century English documents bear the names of Reginald le Colt, William le Colt, and Ranulph Colt. It is known that many of the French immigrants in England, especially during the sixteenth century, adopted translated forms of their names. Thus, "Colt" frequently represents the French "Poulain."

The personal name "Cecil" is ultimately of Latin origin, and means "blind."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

Play Opportunities.

In cities where homes have shrunk to apartments and back yards have largely disappeared it is necessary to provide consciously the play opportunities that came so naturally to the child whose house with cellar and attic and shed sat back under trees in a spacious yard.

His toys must be chosen with deliberate, intelligent consideration for the type of play to which they will stimulate him.

For the buildings and play schemes which his father as a boy made of stray materials found in the shed or in some vacant lot we must give him large wooden blocks especially designed for his use.

For the climbing and sliding and lifting and pulling which any healthy child could find to do in an informal, unfledged environment we must provide the specific stimulation of swings, slides, bars and empty boxes.

There is, of course, not room for much apparatus in an apartment, and perhaps the public playground is too far away to be accessible in all weathers, but it is surprising to see how much fun a child can have with a removable swing or bar hung up in a doorway and what exciting slides and bridges he can build with one or two planks and two empty grocery boxes.

The mother of the city child must learn to make the most of whatever play facilities there are in her neighborhood.

Frequently there are organized groups in charge of a trained play leader.

Women On the Job

The wheat surplus mess is a home problem

Housewives know what to do with left-over food. They encourage their families to eat it up. That's plain common sense. But you couldn't expect men to think of anything so simple as that.

Take the wheat surplus, for instance. All the trouble men are making such a fuss over amounts to this: There's too much wheat in the country. More than enough to go around. Farmers can't sell all their wheat. Yet many of them depend on it for a living.

Any woman can tell you that the way to get rid of too much wheat is to encourage the people to eat it up. An extra slice of bread for all each meal would soon do it. If your families won't eat an extra slice—just cut it a little thicker. Or try macaroni or noodles—anything full of wheat. Whether you buy wheat products from A&P or not, feed your families lots of wheat. It's good for them.

What this country needs is a good housekeeper.

WIFE OF ABDUCTED MAN WAITING WORD

First Attempt to Deliver $2,000 of Ransom Fund Proves Fruitless.

RUM RUNNERS BLAMED

Detroit, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Relatives of Charles Kaier, kidnaped wealthy retired real estate man, were awaiting further word from the kidnapers tonight following an unsuccessful attempt by Mrs. Kaier to deliver $2,000 of the ransom demanded, at a hotel here last night.

Kaier left his home Thursday night with four men who posed as Federal prohibition agents and said they were taking him to the United States district attorney's office.

The kidnaping was not made public until last night after Mrs. Kaier returned home in an hysterical condition after spending several hours in the lobby of a hotel waiting for a representative of the kidnapers to appear and receive part of the ransom.

Police Had Men There.

Police said today they had known of the kidnaping since within 24 hours after Kaier was abducted and had followed his wife to the hotel. Two detectives sat in the lobby while Mrs. Kaier awaited the "leg man" for the kidnapers and others were stationed outside, it was announced.

Police said the kidnapers at first demanded $10,000 ransom and that Mrs. Kaier induced them to reduce their demand to $3,000. As she left her home for the hotel in which she was to pay part of the ransom, two taxicabs loaded with detectives trailed her car. Police said they learned of the kidnaping from sources other than the family of the abducted man.

Inspector John Hoffman, head of the black hand squad, said tonight that entrance of Joseph (Peajacket) Wojniak, alleged rumrunner, indicted two years ago on charges of bribing United States border custom patrolmen into the case, had led officers to investigate possible dealings of Kaier with alleged rumrunners.

Blames Rumrunners.

Inspector Hoffman said that, since rumrunning had become relatively unprofitable with the passage of the Canadian law against importing liquor into the United States, liquor racketeers were known to be "shaking down" persons who for one reason or another were not in position to appeal to authorities for protection.

Up to this time, the racketeers have used threats rather than acts, Hoffman said.

Hoffman said Wojniak called the Kaier home several times to offer assistance and advice to Mrs. Kaier after Kaier was abducted and then was taken into custody for questioning.

Mayor of Chicago Gains In Fight for Recovery

Chicago, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Mayor William Hale Thompson gained ground today in his fight to recover from an emergency appendicitis operation and, while not out of danger, attending physicians regarded the outlook as a little more favorable.

The crisis, expected to occur this afternoon, will not be reached until tomorrow, Dr. Milton M. Portis, one of the doctors in charge, said.

village from the air. The attack culminated Saturday and was partially successful, although a majority of the savages escaped farther into the wilderness.

The Japanese assert it is impossible to tell the aborigine losses because the savages carry off their dead whenever possible, but it was estimated they suffered at least 80 killed and many wounded. Prior to Saturday, the losses to the Japanese forces were reported as three killed and seven wounded. This did not include civilians killed.

Apparently hundreds of savage warriors still are defending the natural strongholds in the neighborhood of Mahebo and the conflict there may be long drawn.

To think of Chicago . . .
The Liberty Limited
and The Golden Arrow

GOING to Chicago? Automatically, experienced travelers think of The Liberty Limited and The Golden Arrow, leaders of the Pennsylvania fleet of nine trains daily.

Their schedules are swift and conveniently arranged to meet business and social plans both here and in Chicago. Their equipment is luxurious and up-to-date. The delicious food served on their modern diners has inspired many letters from prominent people. And picked men are chosen for the train crew which provides courteous, expert service.

Equally luxurious are the two famous Pennsylvania flyers to St. Louis—The American and the "Spirit of St. Louis"—leaders of a fleet of six trains daily.

All these Pennsylvania trains to the West travel over one of the smoothest roadbeds in America, laid with rails more than one-third heavier than those in ordinary use.

When you plan a trip to Chicago or St. Louis, think first of all of the Pennsylvania.

NATIONALIST CHINA IS MOVING ON REDS

Ships, Infantry and Airplanes Are Dispatched to Infested Areas.

NO HELP FOR CAPTIVES

Shanghai, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—By land, water and air, the Nationalist government moved tonight against the Communist and bandit hordes which have ravaged the central provinces for months and constitute the principal obstacle to Nanking's effort to establish order throughout China.

Legions of infantrymen, numbering more than 100,000, were dispatched to the provinces of Hunan and Kiangsi with orders to rescue the populace from the grip of the reds. A squadron of bombing planes, well supplied with bombs, was sent to Nanchang, Kiangsi, to serve as eyes for the infantry.

Several gunboats were dispatched into the inland waters of Poyang Lake, Kiangsi and Tungting Lake, Hunan, around whose borders the reds have been active. The armed vessels were slated to undertake to sweep Communists from the vicinities of these waters.

Indications of Drive Seen.

Indications that the Nationalist government was proceeding with the drive against the reds, as announced a fortnight ago by President Chiang Kai-shek, were seen in statements by numerous Nanking officials on week-end trips to Shanghai. Officials claimed 35,000 soldiers already have passed through Hankow into Hunan Province, while 80,000 entered Kiangsi through Kiukiang and smaller cities further up the Yangtze River. The troops, officials said, were preparing to proceed southward in three columns, hoping to sweep the provinces clear of outlaws of every description.

Nanking officials claimed that north of the Yangtze the anti-Red plans were also functioning, with 30,000 infantrymen arriving in northern Hupeh and southern Honan provinces along the Peiping-Hankow Railway to undertake a systematic campaign against outlaws in those districts.

Additional Forces Expected.

Additional forces, they said, would enter Anhwei and northern Kiangsu provinces soon. The officials anticipated the initial clash with the brigands throughout the central provinces would start soon.

While Nanking was preparing to start an anti-Red offensive, those brigands continue pillaging and killing. Latest advices from outlying communities in Hunan and Kiangsi indicated the bandits continue firmly in control, while along the Yangtze River Communist batteries continued to attack passing ships with ever increased severity.

Meanwhile the fate of numerous captive missionaries remained uncertain. The Reds continued to demand huge ransoms for the release of these unfortunate persons, who were threatened with death if the money was not paid.

Missions continued to urge Nanking to effect the captives' release, while Nanking asked the various provincial military to seek to rescue the captives and admitted that the government was helpless to assist the trapped missionaries. Fate of the missionaries seems to depend entirely upon the whims of their respective captors.

Five Egyptian Students Shot by Police in Riot

Cairo, Egypt, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Five students were shot and several others arrested today in a riot at the Boulac Technical School after attempts had been made to set fire to the building. The wounded were taken to a hospital. Police first said they fired over the heads of the rioters. Premier Ismail Sidky Pasha held a long conference with the director of public safety regarding measures for maintaining order. There were disturbances in three other schools yesterday.

There has been acute tension in Egypt for some time due to differences between the Government party and Liberals over proposed constitutional reforms. Police and cavalry were ordered out to patrol the streets late last month.

Community Buying Urged By Wells as Economic Cure

British Author in Radio Talk Outlines Proposal to Take Care of Mass Production; Leaves Details to Future.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—H. G. Wells, British author, put before an American radio audience today an idea whereby the world of the future would solve the economic riddle by developing mass consumption and community buying to meet adequately the system of mass production.

Speaking from London on "The World of Our Grandchildren," Wells referred to "The Fantastic Paradox of World Business," asserting that there are huge stocks of merchandise which the people can not buy. He declared the equivalent to mass production was community buying.

"We buy battleships on the community plan," he said, "and if we can do that, I refuse to believe we can not buy hotels, perfectly equipped houses and boots and shoes for most of the people of the world in the same way. Collectively we can buy everything that we collectively produce.

"There are scores of thousands of people living in unfit houses, wearing improper clothes and eating insufficient food," he said, asking "why shouldn't we as a community take these people, whether they like it or not, and buy for them better houses, better clothing and better food?"

He said he didn't purpose to state how his suggestion could be carried out, asserting it was a social and economic problem whose solution would rest with the future.

His talk was broadcast into the United States by the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Man Found Dead Feared Gang's Torture Victim

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—To their ever-lengthening list of slayings attributed to gangsters, police today added one more name. The body of a man identified as Felix Lopresete, 35, was found in a vacant lot in Astoria.

His throat had been slashed and around his neck was a length of tightly bound sash cord. The condition of the body led police to suspect he had been tortured. Detectives declared the man had been arrested four times in the course of his career, but never had been convicted.

Gov. Ritchie Urges Strike Arbitration

Distress Among Families of Lonaconing Miners Very Real, He Says.

Special to The Washington Post.

Cumberland, Md., Nov. 2.—Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, who conferred here with A. K. Althouse, of Philadelphia, president of the Big Vein Coal Co. of Lonaconing, last Monday, which resulted in Mr. Althouse meeting with a committee of striking miners, has again communicated with Mr. Althouse, asking that he submit the matter to arbitration.

Mr. Althouse heard the demand of the committee for 75 cents a ton for pick mining and $4 a day for labor, but he made the counter-proposition that the men return at the wage they received when they struck—65 cents a ton and $3.75 a day for labor. This the men have declined to do. Gov. Ritchie in his letter to Mr. Althouse says:

"I know that the distress among the families and these men is very real and I have every reason to think that they feel that there is justice on their side under all the circumstances and with the hope of reaching a satisfactory adjustment in the interest of everybody concerned, will you be willing to submit the questions involved to arbitration?"

Overdue Lake Vessel Is Safe at Soo Canal

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., Nov. 1 (A.P.).—The Canadian grain carrier Ashbay, overdue here since Wednesday, passed through the locks of the Soo Canal at 3:05 a. m. today.

The United States Coast Guard cutter Seminole returned to its base here today without having found any evidence of a ship in distress as had been reported last Friday by the lighthouse keeper on Michipicoten Island in Lake Superior. Officers of the Coast Guard said they believed all ships on Superior were accounted for and the ship the light keeper thought he saw through a heavy snowstorm "probably was imagined."

They are described as members of the textile union. Broome telephoned for the police when he found the pursuing car parked outside his home on North Main street with three men in it. Police detectives say they found a .22-caliber revolver in the machine.

Law Change Saves Seven From Jail

Slot-Machine Fines Paid by Prisoners in Winchester.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Nov. 2.—Half a dozen Frederick County people narrowly escaped going to jail here late yesterday, when discovery was made that the last General Assembly amended the law against slot machines. The old law made a jail sentence mandatory in addition to fines, but during the recent session of the Legislature the obligatory jail sentence was stricken out.

Trial of the case was proceeding, and Judge A. J. Tavenner announced all defendants had been found guilty. They immediately noted appeals, assuming that conviction carried a jail sentence. A court official, however, found the law had been amended, no appeals were withdrawn and fines paid. Henry Kern was fined $50 and costs for having been the agent who placed the machines with storekeepers. Others paying fines were Mrs. A. H. McCarroll, Mrs. Hazel Bidget, Robert Santmyer, J. C. Ramey, J. F. Nelson and son. Several additional cases are to be tried.

The owner of one of the machines, which contained $60, wanted to regain possession of the money in order to pay his fine, claiming it belonged to him. His plea was denied by the court, which stated that both money and machine had been confiscated, and that the State would get the money.

WITH A FORD TRUCK

THE full measure of hauling-value offered by the Ford 1½-ton truck is available to those who need a truck with large loading-space. In addition to the chassis with 131½-inch wheelbase, there is one with 157-inch wheelbase, especially planned for carrying light but bulky loads without a red flag fluttering behind.

Thus, to a larger number of businesses, the long, reliable, low-cost service of the Ford truck becomes directly available. Records of service in these new fields, as in every business where the Ford truck is in daily use, show that it offers a value far in excess of the price.

Chassis features, which contribute to reliability, strength and performance, are the spiral bevel gear rear axle, which has a straddle-mounted pinion; large, fully enclosed mechanical brakes; 4-speed transmission; heavy front axle and spring; option of two rear-axle gear-ratios; and dual rear wheels, available at small additional cost.

Standard bodies are offered for many purposes, with a choice of open or closed cabs. All are equipped with Triplex shatter-proof glass windshields. FISHER DISCOVERS SPAIN IS ESCAPING BUSINESS DEPRESSION

Spanish Wholesale Prices Stand Out for Stability

Business Index Rises Despite Political Revolts—Paper Peseta Remains Stable Though Gold Reserve Being Cut Off From Currency.

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.
Special to the Washington Post.

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 2.—World-wide depression exists in almost all countries with the exception of Spain. Like the Latin American countries, Spain is in a period of political disturbance. Political unrest throughout the world has been properly ascribed, in most cases, to dissatisfaction of the masses because of hard times. This is not the reason for the Spanish unrest, because the small revolutions occurring recently in that kingdom and the constant threat of a big revolution against king, government and the present constitution have been made while Spanish industry has been improving. Moreover, business has improved while the Spanish currency, in terms of gold, has been inflated.

Potent Paper Pesetas.

Curiously, Spain is one of the richest gold-owning countries of Europe. Her reserve amounts to half a billion dollars' worth of gold—almost twice Italy's reserve, although the population of Italy is twice that of Spain.

Spain, unlike the other European countries since the war, did not place her currency on the gold basis. While the gold currencies of other European Nations have been appreciating in value, causing the commodity price levels and business activity to sink, the Spanish paper peseta and the Spanish price level have remained stable and her business has prospered in spite of world wide depression. Spain has impounded her gold reserve and has maintained a drastic embargo on exports of gold. For ten years the Spanish gold reserve has remained intact, but dead, inert, wholly cut off from the currency.

No Domestic Depreciation.

Here, perhaps, is the explanation of the enigma. The purchasing power of gold has increased greatly in Europe during the past two or three years, with a corresponding fall of commodity price levels. But Spain's currency not being gold-based, has not permitted this fall in price levels of the products of Spanish industry. The official index number of commodity prices in Spain, computed on the basis of 1913 equaling 100, was published at 169 in the fourth quarter of 1927 by the ministry of labor in Madrid. It was then that the depreciation of the peseta started. But it has depreciated only enough to overcome the damaging upward fluctuation in the purchasing power of gold. The Spanish commodity index, which stood at 172 in December, 1929, was back again at 168 in May, 1930, dropped still further to 166 in June, and rose slightly to 170 in July, which is the latest figure quoted in the report by the United States Department of Commerce on October 20.

There has been since 1927 a depreciation by more than 27 per cent in the gold value of the peseta, from 17 cents during the last quarter of 1929 to 12.3 cents in May, 1930. But this fall had virtually no influence on the purchasing power of the paper peseta in the Spanish home market.

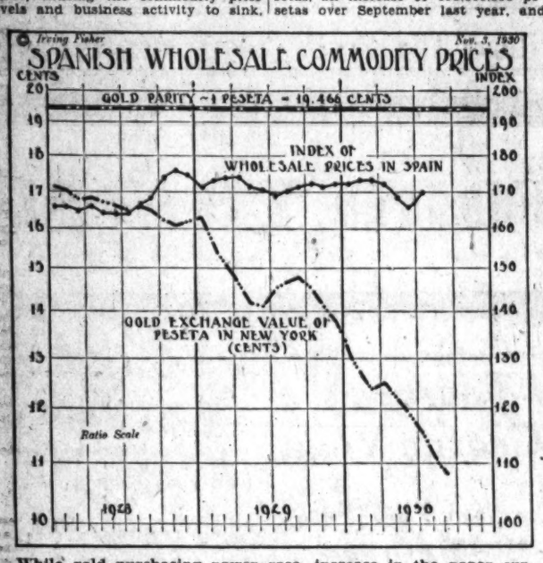
We are forced to conclude that by a singular chance, and apparently without any intention on the part of the Spanish government, Spain has achieved the unique preeminence of a "managed" currency, based on her volume of trade instead of upon the elastic yardstick of the gold standard. The damaging elasticity of gold purchasing power has been a prime factor in plunging the world business into depression, while politically turbulent Spain has been forging ahead in a business way.

Good Business Volume.

For example, the Department of Commerce of October 20 published a radiogram from acting Commercial Attache J. C. Greenup of Madrid, in cooperation with the consuls at Barcelona and Bilbao. This radiogram states that bank clearance in Madrid during September, 1930, totaled 2,460,000,000 pesetas, a gain of 71,000,000 pesetas over September, 1929; that the corresponding figures for Barcelona were 1,410,000,000 pesetas, an increase of 198,000,000 pesetas over September last year, and at Bilbao clearances totaled 171,330,000 pesetas, a drop of only 9,000,000 pesetas from the September, 1929 figures. Spanish budget receipts for the first eight months of 1930 show a gain of 32,560,000 pesetas over the corresponding period last year. While the difference in exchange has affected the Spanish market for imported products, yet the imports during the first eight months of 1930 exceeded those of the corresponding period of 1929, by 190,000,000 pesetas. Spanish exports are reported as unusually large, and, while motor car registrations have decreased, this is ascribed in U. S. Commerce Reports on September 15, wholly to the increase of tariff duties on automobiles. While definite unemployment figures were unavailable, it was reported that the "situation was not considered serious."

It is possible, of course, for the nations whose currencies are based on gold to stabilize gold purchasing power. That is just now one of the prime concerns of the League of Nations. But by chance Spain has shown the superiority, in terms of business welfare, of a monetary medium of exchange brought into strict stabilizing relation with the level of prices.

(Copyright, 1930.)



While gold purchasing power rose, increase in the paper currency of Spain made its gold exchange value fall, but stabilized the Spanish wholesale price level.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—New municipal bond issues scheduled for award this week amount to $11,321,900, compared with offerings of $27,482,000 last week. An issue of $4,850,000 State of Arkansas bonds to be placed Thursday is the only issue for the week of more than $1,000,000.

The Sinclair Refining Co. announces that up to the end of October it has purchased this year the facilities and business of 59 petroleum marketing companies, operating in seventeen States. This does not include the Pierce Petroleum Corporation, acquisition of which was announced previously. The 59 companies represent 1,511 bulk distribution plants, service stations and resale, or dealer, outlets. In addition to these, the Sinclair Co. has bought from individual distributors 7 bulk plants and 52 service stations and has obtained under long-term leases 10 bulk plants and 189 service stations.

Directors of the Globe Insurance Co. of America and Sylvania Insurance Co. of Philadelphia have approved a proposal to merge the two companies under the name of Globe Insurance Co. of America, subject to approval of the insurance commissioner of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

A stockholders' committee, headed by E. A. Pierce, is seeking deposits of both preferred and common stocks of the Chicago & Alton Railroad "in order more effectively to protect stockholders' interests" in any acquisition of that railroad by the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad, an announcement today said. Mr. Pierce said the committee was formed in 1922 and since that time has been working toward an amicable adjustment of the differences between various litigants. In a notice to stockholders, the committee said it had notified the Interstate Commerce Commission of its desire to be heard should any application be made to carry into effect any plan of the Baltimore & Ohio to acquire complete control of the "Chicago & Alton Railroad Co. in utter disregard of stockholders."

The Texas Corporation announced that by a written agreement dated November 1, 1930, it has offered to exchange its stock for common stock of the Indian Refining Co. on the basis of one share of Texas Corporation stock for eight shares of Indian Refining Co. stock. The agreement carries the provision that on or before December 15, 1930, 75 per cent of the Indian Refining Co. stock shall have been deposited with the Guaranty Trust Co. of New York for exchange.

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The upward trend but closing fall in stock groups on the New York exchange follow the course of individual leaders. The price level of the common industrials dropped back to within 1 per cent of the year's low at last week's close, after advancing by 5.2 per cent from the low of 104.2, on October 22, to 109.6 on October 28. The weekly average last week, at 107.8, shows an increase of 1.7 per cent over the preceding week's average of 106 1, indicating that the trend has been upward. But for the sharp decline in the closing sessions, that brought the building supplies, chemicals, steels, stores and miscellaneous groups to new lows, the advance would have been an encouraging note. Instead, it is a further indication that stock price levels are settling, and although the index may sag to new lows in the near future, the rate of decline is definitely reduced and the assumption that the time when price levels will show improvement should not be far in the future.

The farm machinery and preferred groups alone held a declining trend last week, as indicated by the weekly average. The remaining groups moved up on the average although auto accessories, up by 2.5 per cent; machinery, up by 1.1 per cent, and household products and coppers, holding steady, were the only groups closing last week above the preceding week's close.

Every group rose—radio and amusement, coppers and electrical equipment leading—with gains over their respective lows of 10 per cent. All of the groups suffered in the late week's declines, with building supplies, electrical equipment, motors and radio off by more than 7 per cent each at the close of last week.

Daily Trading Values Fall.

The increase in trading on the New York exchange that accompanied the recent slump in price levels lasted but four weeks. During the last two weeks the average daily value of tradings in all stocks has dropped by 43 per cent, from $167,300,000 to $96,000,000. Last week's drop of 24 per cent in all stocks and 21 pper cent in common industrial stocks showed only a slight let-up from the preceding week's rate of decline.

The groups of agricultural products, building supplies and stores showed slightly increased values traded last week.

The electrical equipment group was conspicuous among the falls, with the average daily values traded off by $8,800,000 from the preceding week's figure; General Electric and Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing were largely responsible for this 50 per cent drop. The utilities, oils and chemicals and drugs groups dropped in values traded by over $4,000,000, rails by $3,000,000 and motors, steels, miscellaneous, preferreds, tobaccos and machinery groups were off by $1,000,000 each.

Foreign Price Levels Irregular.

The indexes of stock prices in Berlin and Paris showed some weakness following the gains for the preceding week. London stock price levels were steady, following a more conservative rate for the preceding week.

Trading in Berlin was small last week, as prices dropped by 2.4 per cent to 68.1, following a rise of 8 per cent for the preceding week. A like situation was present in Paris, although prices were more stable as compared with the preceding week's level, being off by less than 1 per cent. There was considerable fluctuation in the price levels of individual securities in London, although the weekly index remained at the preceding week's leved of 65.2.

Investments Show Least Resistance.

Last week's rally on the New York Stock Exchange was sufficient to bring the average index for all three of the graded groups, above that of the preceding week. Due to the sharp turn for the worse in the closing sessions last week, the movement over the week is off in all three groups; investment stocks, showing the least resistance, were off by 3.5 per cent; semiinvestment stocks, off by 2.6 per cent and speculative stocks off by 1.4 per cent.

No one of the graded groups dropped below its previous 1930 low; they closed last week less than 1 per cent above these records on October 22 in the first and second grades, and, on October 20, in the third-grade industrial group.

PRICES ARE WEAK IN RAW MATERIAL

Coffee, Grain, Petroleum, Hides and Hogs Counteract Gain in Silk and Cotton.

COMMODITY INDEX IS OFF

Raw materials were the weak spot in last week's wholesale commodity market. The index dropped by 0.97 per cent to 81.4, the low since the week ended October 4, and 3.2 per cent above the years' low in the week ended July 26. Coffee, grains, hides, petroleum and hogs were responsible for this fall last week, counteracting gains in cotton and silk.

Semimanufactured goods rose by 0.27 per cent last week on the strength of higher prices in tin, oils and sugar. This is the first rise in the semimanufactured goods index since the week ended August 30.

Finished goods dropped with the market, by 0.24 per cent, following a rise in the preceding week. Burlap, butter, cheese, flour, wire nails, barbed wire and lard were the leading commodities to fall in this group.

Three of the group indexes were at new low levels last week. Farm products were off by 0.71 per cent to 83.9, metal products off by 0.22 per cent to 88.8 and building materials off by 0.47 per cent to 85.8.

Foodstuffs were weak, dropping by 0.78 per cent and hides and leathers were the conspicuous feature in last week's market, dropping by over 2 per cent. The chemicals and textiles groups were steady, the miscellaneous groups up, and the fuel and lighting group off by 0.13 per cent.

Commodity Slightly Weak.

The levels of wholesale commodity prices fell slightly last week, to continue the fluctuating process which has witnessed alternate strength and weakness for the last two months. The Irving Fisher all-commodity wholesale index stood at 82.4 last week (1926 equals 100), a drop of 0.36 per cent from the preceding week.

The declines in individual commodities increased to 76 per cent of the total number of price changes last week, from 44 per cent in the preceding week.

With the index of all commodities off to within 0.1 of a point of the low of the week ended October 4, the purchasing power of the dollar in wholesale markets is at 121.3. In other words, the wholesale dollar is worth 21.3 cents more at last week's level than it was worth in 1926.

Foreign Prices Rise Sharply.

After fluctuating wholesale price levels during the past month, commodity markets in France and Germany last week took a sharp rise of 1.03 per cent and 1.33 per cent, respectively. These are the largest rises recorded in any one week for several months.

Conditions in England continue to improve, with a gain of 0.14 per cent last week, following a rise of 0.55 per cent for the preceding week. The recent rise in the English commodity price level indicates a definite pause in the decline that had obtained for a long period.

BOND PRICE LEVEL IS HOLDING STEADY

But Industrial and Rails of Second Grade Touch Low of Year.

UTILITIES SHOW GAIN

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The Irving Fisher Index of 70 bonds on the New York Stock Exchange showed bond prices stabilized last week at the level of 100.7, which is less than 0.1 of an index point above the weekly index for the week ended July 4, the low from which the three months' summer advance began. The average daily value of trading dropped by 15 per cent.

Due to the sharp decline in bond prices for the week ended October 24, last week's average index is off by 0.2 per cent from the preceding week, while the level at last week's close shows an advance of 0.13 per cent from the preceding week's close. This is characteristic of the movement in the first-grade rails, U. S. Government and public utility groups. First-grade rail bonds again displayed the greatest activity in price last week, closing the week with a gain of 0.59 per cent over the preceding week's close in spite of irregular prices during the first two sessions of last week. Public utility bonds closed last week up by 0.30 per cent from the preceding week's close. U. S. Government issues were weak through Tuesday from which point they advanced by 0.39 per cent to the week's close with a gain over the week of 0.20 per cent.

The industrial, foreign government and second-grade rails groups were less responsive to the rise in bond price levels during the latter half of last week, closing the week with losses from the preceding week's close. Foreign government bonds were outstanding, dropping to the low since June 28 on October 30, and closing the week off by 0.33 per cent. The second-grade rails group dropped to the year's low at 99.0 on October 30 and closed the week off by 0.10 per cent. Industrial bonds were at the year's low on October 25, from which point the level advanced to the week's close by 0.14 per cent, but to show a loss over the week of 0.08 per cent.

How Gold Came Into Use.

How does it happpen that any particular commodity comes into use as money? Not originally because a government so decreed but because the commodity was very salable for other uses than money and could be readily resold. Thus gold came into use as money. Some wanted it for jewelry, but others could easily be induced to accept it, even though they had no personal use for it themselves, because they knew they could resell it at any time.

Purchasing Power of Money.

The willingness to give or take money depends upon the purchasing power of money over other things. Will a man pay 10 cents for a pound of sugar? That depends on whether he wants the sugar more than something else purchasable at 10 cents. The man, in other words, balances in his mind the sugar and the money—the latter standing in his mind for any goods he could spend it for.

8 MAJOR ELEVENS REMAIN UNBEATEN AND UNTIED

Hawks Down Tacony Club By 14-0

Sweeney and Colliere Star in Defeat of Visiting Team.

Pass Leads to Initial Score; Hawk Line Improved.

TEN years ago a spindle-legged boy tossed a forward pass to a round-faced kid with one stocking hanging down, who stumbled across the goal line to give the Stanton Juniors, of Northeast, a victory and the District 115-pound championship. This same combination of Joe Sweeney and Fee Colliere promises to go a long way toward settling the District 1930 independent championship.

Yesterday these players, who matured with a football tucked under their arms, played a prominent part in a 14-to-0 victory scored by the Mohawks over the previously undefeated Tacony Aces before some 2,000 fans at Griffith Stadium.

Hawks Make Best Showing Of Season.

Sweeney and Colliere did not turn back the hefty Pennsylvanians unaided. In all it was the best showing of the Hawks this season, but it was the presence of this pair in the Indian line-up which swung the pendulum of victory toward the local club.

The Apaches saw the game and left the park figuring ways and means of putting the brakes on this pair in their annual game next month. However, the Mohawks seemed determined not to show their full hand, and after the first half had brought a pair of touchdowns, Coach Abbey never had his first-string eleven intact.

The Mohawks showed their best line play of the season as long as the regulars were on the job, but the visitors split the reserve line wide open and were on the way to a score when Abbey sent in enough strength to halt the drive.

The Tacony players lost no weight since they tied the Apaches here a fortnight ago. Carson and Young, elephantine guards, earned their share of the guarantee. However, it was a 140-pound end with his head bandaged and a No. 5 on his back that stole the show. Clausen is his name. He stopped everything aimed his way, cleared the way for Philadelphia backs and near the end of the game made a sensational catch of a pass. The 45-yard gain, however, was ruled out because a teammate was off-side.

Hawks Lose No Time in Getting Started.

The Hawks lost no time in getting under way. Sweeney failed to get the kick-off out of Mohawk territory but the Indians began a drive that carried them to the 20-yard line only to have the 15-yard penalties force them to punt. Tacony returned the kick and the Hawks gained momentum. This time it was a pass from Colliere to Sweeney that put the ball on the Tacony 20-yard line. Gains by Gass and DeLabre picked up a first down but Tacony braced and it appeared that the Mohawks would fail to count. On fourth down, Colliere dropped back and shot a pass at Sweeney's belt buckle and Joe pulled in the ball for a touchdown. Sweeney held the ball while Browning booted it over for the point.

A 15-yard penalty got Tacony in trouble soon after the kick-off and they were forced to punt after the

Shots at Race Horse Make Case for Police

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 1 (A.P.).—Detectives were called upon today to investigate one of the most sensational happenings in the history of Australian racing.

A horse named Pharlap, a favorite for the Melbourne Cup, one of the most famous Australian races, was being exercised early today by a stable lad, who saw a motor car halt and one of the occupants rise and fire a rifle shot at the animal.

The stable boy pulled the horse's head around and saved its life, but two more shots were fired which passed through the lower part of the animal's blanket.

Later in the day Pharlap easily won the Melbourne Stakes at Flemington course, to which he was taken in a steel motor van guarded by armed police who accompanied it right up to the starting post.

It was stated that if Pharlap wins the Melbourne Cup Tuesday the bookmakers will have to pay out considerable money.

Maryland Plays Generals In Week-End Grid Feature

Washington and Lee Homecoming Guests at College Park Saturday; George Washington-New York Aggies in Night Game.

THE biggest week-end of football here this season lies ahead for Washington fans this week. Four games are scheduled, with one being listed for Friday night. The feature is the Maryland-Washington and Lee contest, due Saturday afternoon in Byrd Stadium, College Park, where the Old Liners and Generals will resume warfare after a lapse of one year.

Only Georgetown of the six Capital college elevens will play away from home. Coach Tommy Mills' team, greatly encouraged by a 14-13 defeat of Michigan State, previously undefeated, will tackle Boston College in the Hub City Saturday afternoon.

George Washington, which surprised with its fine showing against Tulsa University, one of the strongest teams of the Southwest, will entertain in the Friday night contest, meeting New York Aggies in Griffith Stadium. In the other games, Catholic will oppose American in Brookland Stadium and Gallaudet will engage Shepherd College at Kendall Green.

Maryland Favored To Win.

Maryland, highly gratified by its 14-6 defeat of Virginia last Saturday, eagerly looks forward to the game with Washington and Lee, and if the dope holds true Coach Curly Byrd's eleven should take the Generals into camp.

It is Maryland's "homecoming day" game and hundreds of Old Line alumni will gather once more to see what Byrd has developed for 1930 competition. The program at College Park also calls for a freshman game between Maryland and Washington and Lee yearlings and various events of a social nature for the old grads, culminating in a big dance at night at Ritchie Gymnasium.

Georgetown departs Thursday night for Boston and will hold a practice there Friday in final preparation for its meeting with the Eagles. Coach Mills views the forthcoming game as just as hard as the Michigan State affair. He was naturally pleased with the Hilltop's surprise victory over the Spartans, but saw several physical defects which he says must be ironed out before Georgetown can finish its campaign successfully.

Beginning with the Boston College fray, Georgetown plays four major games in a row, New York U., Villanova and Detroit being the other foes. Mills opines that New York U. and Detroit are the toughest of the four.

G. W. Pleases Coach With Showing.

George Washington pleasantly surprised its mentor, Jim Pixlee, too. Returning from Tulsa yesterday, Pixlee stated: "Our fellows really played better than I had anticipated. What pleased me most was the indomitable spirit they showed against a team that was rated four touchdowns stronger."

The Colonials will meet soft opposition Friday night if the records mean anything. New York Aggies have won only two out of five contests played to date and not one of their opponents could be called formidable even in third-class competition.

Catholic U. and American figure to stage a warm battle at Brookland. From here it seems that this will prove the only winning appearance of Catholic for the season. The game will mark the close of American's schedule.

Gallaudet, held scoreless by the Carlisle (Pa.) Army Medicos last Saturday, should resume its victorious parade against Shepherd, which earlier bowed to American, a team that Gallaudet sunk by 18 to 6.

Northwestern Star Fullback Is Injured

Evanston, Ill., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Ernest ("Pug") Rentner, of Joliet, Ill., Northwestern's star full back, will be out of action until the Northwestern-Wisconsin game a week from Saturday, because of an injury suffered during the Wildcat triumph over Minnesota yesterday.

Rentner suffered a bruised vertebrae late in the game, causing partial paralysis of his right arm, and will be unable to play against Indiana at Bloomington next Saturday. Harry Pritchard or Al Moore will be substituted for him.

Purple and Michigan Tied at Top of Big Ten

Chicago, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Northwestern and Michigan tonight were deadlocked for the Western Conference leadership, with the prospect that the 1930 season will end with these two teams dividing th honors.

Northwestern moved into a tie with the Wolverines yesterday as a result of walloping Minnesota, 27 to 6, while Michigan was enjoying a day off before its game with Harward next Saturday. Meanwhile, Purdue took second place by its 25-to-0 triumph over Illinois. With Northwestern and Michigan fighting it out for the title, the worst that Purdue can get is third place, provided the Boilermakers defeat Chicago and Indiana, their remaining two Big Ten opponents.

Standing, based on conference competition only, follows:

	W.	L.	T.	TP.	OP.	Pct.
Northwestern	3	0	0	78	6	1.000
Michigan	3	0	0	42	20	1.000
Purdue	3	1	0	65	20	.750
Minnesota	1	1	0	12	27	.500
Wisconsin	1	1	1	40	7	.500
Ohio State	1	2	1	25	23	.333
Iowa	0	1	0	0	20	.000
Chicago	0	1	0	0	34	.000
Indiana	0	2	0	0	29	.000
Illinois	0	3	0	7	72	.000

MEXICAL POLOISTS WIN.

CUMBERLAND GAME LOST BY SAINTS

La Salle Scores Near End as St. John's Is Beaten, 7-0.

Special to The Washington Post.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Nov. 2.—La Salle Institute of Cumberland vanquished St. John's Cadets of Washington on the gridiron here this afternoon, Dehart carrying the ball across on a line plunge in the last six minutes of play to defeat the visitors, 7 to 0, in a bitterly waged duel. For three chukkers the teams battled on the even-stephen basis, but in the final canto La Salle cut loose with a sustained attack that won the game.

The trouble started when Dehart, taking Juliano's punt on LaSalle's 40-yard line, ran it to midfield. A pair of laterals, Dehart to Conley and Dehart to Oneill, gave the Institute a first down on Washington's 25-yard line.

10-Yard St. John's Penalty Helps La Salle.

The visitors when then penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness and it was another first down for the big Green, this time on Washington's 5-yard area. At this stage, O'Neill carried the ball for 4 yards and on the second down Dehart went across for the touchdown and then kicked the goal.

The battle, a viciously played affair, was the best seen here this year. The Cadets registered six first downs and the Institute fourteen. Washington was within 15 yards of LaSalle's goal in the opening half, but failed to score.

RIGGS HANDICAP OPENING FEATURE AT PIMLICO

$25,000 Race Draws Fine Field

$65,000 Futurity Is Down for Decision on Wednesday.

Equipoise and Vander Pool Meet Again in Rich Race.

BALTIMORE, Md., Nov. 2.—The Pimlico autumn meeting of eleven days begins Tuesday under the auspices of the Maryland Jockey Club, which organization is celebrating 100 years of leadership in racing. The Riggs Handicap of $25,000 added features the opening card. The post time for the first race is 1:15 p. m.

On the second day, Wednesday, November 5, the $65,000 Futurity will be run, and it seems probable this renewal may be the most interesting race of the year for 2-year-olds, due to developments in this division since the retirement of Jamestown after winning the Futurity at Belmont Park. Mrs. Payne Whitney's Twenty Grand has become the sensational colt of the year since his victory in the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes. He ran the mile in 1:36 in that test, defeating Equipoise.

Young Whitney to Send Equipoise In Classic.

The announcement that the late Harry Payne Whitney's colors would remain in action under the direction of his son, C. V. Whitney, and the assurance that Equipoise would start in this classic, adds new interest to the forthcoming race, as well as furnishing a worthy contender.

Vander Pool has the record of eleven winning race in eleven starts, only discounted by the disqualification of Equipoise, which gave the Tennessee stable colt his unbroken succession of victories.

A. C. Bostwick's Mate, which won under top impost in the Spalding Lowe Jenkins Handicap Saturday at Laurel, following his victory in the Breeders Futurity at Lexington, brings into the contest another dangerous opponent of the Greentree star.

The Futurity field doubtless will be large, and there are many eligibles—such as the Epinard colt, Siskin, which carried high weight to an easy victory in fast time at Laurel; the stake winners, Tarpaulin and Tambour, and Tambour was drawing away from a fast field in the Johnson Stakes at Laurel; the two J. E. Widener stars, Priory and Novelist, the last named having given Jamestown his hardest race; W. M. Jeffords' Aegis; the Belair Stud's Ormesby; R. A. Fairburn's Glastonbury, and others, all will add to the uncertainty of this final big test for 2-year-olds.

Pimlico Features Not Listed On Saturday.

The question is asked, Why are the Preakness and the Futurity run on week days instead of Saturdays, the day on which large stakes elsewhere are run at most of the other race courses in the country? The answer is that the Pimlico track draws capacity crowds on Saturdays without the extra attraction of a classic. If the Futurity were run on Saturday, the space would be inadequate even with an overflow of several thousand in the infield.

Besides the Riggs on opening day, the Towson Steeplechase of $2,000 will be renewed; the fourth race will be the Country Club Purse, the Riggs the fifth and the other four races will be overnight purses, the minimum being $1,300.

The Riggs is for 3-year-olds. The field should be a strong one. Woodcraft, Yarn, Buckeye Poet, Challenger, $100,000 English horse that has been working well; Conclave, Ned O., Sun Falcon, Fortunate Youth, Her Grace, Starpatic, Mr. Sponge, Erin and Gone Away have been pointed for the race.

The stake schedule for Pimlico is: November 4, the Riggs Handicap, $25,000 added; November 5, Pimlico Futurity, $40,000 added; November 6, Baltimore Handicap, $3,500 added; November 7, the Helpful, $2,500 added; November 8, Pimlico Weight for Age, $4,000; November 8, Manley Memorial Steeplechase, $10,000 added; November 10, Pimlico Homebred, $2,500 added; November 11, the Bowie, $10,000 added; November 12, Pimlico Graded Handicap, overnight; November 13, Master of Fox Hounds Steeplechase, $2,500 added; November 14, Walden Handicap, $1,000 added; November 15, Pimlico Cup, $10,000 added.

"Baltimore Central" First Name Of Pimlico Track.

In 1830 the Maryland Jockey Club set the example of cooperating with other racing associations since adopted by every track of consequence. The track was measured, and much excitement prevailed when it was found to be 34 inches more than a mile, which was corrected. The most scientific timing devices were obtained abroad, and on October 25, 1831, the first race meeting was held at the "Baltimore Central Course," covering four days. Previously racing had been in vogue in Maryland since 1740.

The first race at the Central course was the "Ladies' Cup," to give "tone" to the racing. It was also arranged to have a "race ball" where young ladies made their debut, patterned after the pre-Revolutionary balls at Annapolis, where George Washington stepped the minuet with the beauties of the day. The "tone" of racing is still at the high level, and this parent organization has brought Laurel, Havre De Grace and Bowie.

Racing has been gradually improved since the establishment of the sport at the present Pimlico track. It is said, and probably is all true, that the 11-day fall meetings held at this quaint, but excellent track now are the richest 11-day seasons in the world. The fall meeting at Belmont Park is 15 days, and tops the world list, for that time but the claim for Pimlico may be technically correct. Each is rich enough, and each attracts the best horses in the country and advances the breeding interests in a degree beyond computation.

second period started. Sweeney brought the kick back to the Philadelphians' 25-yard line and another Hawk drive opened. Abbey provided the climax by sprinting around right end for a touchdown and Colliere drop-kicked the point.

The game ceased to be a rout in the second half, with a number of substitutions made in the Mohawk line-up. Tacony, which had been held without a first down for some 35 minutes of play, suddenly awoke and pounded down the field 45 yards, with a 20-yard off-tackle run by Brown featuring.

Mohawk Regulars Hustled Back in Game.

Coach Abbey hustled in a number of regulars, however, and the Hawks took the ball on downs on the 20-yard line. The Hawks countered with a drive up the field, and were a yard from a score when a fumble ended the advantage. It was following this occurrence that Clausen grabbed the pass, only to be called back.

Wash. State Tightens Hold on Coast Lead

San Francisco, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Without upset or untoward incident to mark the week-end, Pacific Coast conference football reached the mid-season turning point in games that saw Washington State strengthen its hold on top place and California chalk up its first conference victory.

The Washington State Cougars wrote their fourth conference win into the records after a fierce battle with an old-time foe—Oregon State's Beavers. The final score was 14 to 7. California, twice beaten and out of the running for the conference title, displayed a decided reversal of form to take Montana into camp 46—0.

Oklahoma Is Leader In Big Six Campaign

Kansas City, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Oklahoma holds a technical advantage over Kansas in leadership of the Big Six football race today because of its third consecutive victory in tituiar play gained yesterday while Kansas went outside the loop to suffer defeat at the hands of Pennsylvania.

The Kansans have two conference victories to their credit. This weekend, if they can bowl over the Nebraska corn-huskers while Oklahoma is taking it easy in its annual fracas with Sooner freshmen, Kansas and Oklahoma will meet in Lawrence November 15 with unspotted conference records and a title at stake.

Oklahoma achieved its third victory with difficulty, 19 to 13, but the winning touchdown was not counted until late in the fourth period.

position in a 39-0 walloping of the Colorado Aggies.

By overwhelming Minnesota, 27-6, Northwestern tied for the Big Ten lead with Michigan with three victories and no defeats apiece. The Wolverines, unbeaten but tied outside the conference, had an open date to prepare for their invasion of Harvard this Saturday. Meanwhile, Marquette fattened the intersectional average of the Midwest with a 6-0 decision over Boston College.

The University of Texas, after being beaten by Rice, proved that there is nothing certain about football by crushing Southern Methodist, 25-7, in the only Southwest Conference game scheduled.

The Army, with nothing worse than a tie on its record to date, became a distinct favorite over Illinois for their game here this Saturday when the Cadets handed North Dakota its first defeat, 33-6, and Illinois was trampled by Purdue, 25-0.

Among the notable achievements of the day were Pennsylvania's victory over Kansas, 21-6; Columbia's 10-7 upset of Cornell and Iowa's 7-3 success against Detroit.

Nevers Pass Wins For Cardinals.

Chicago, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Ernie Nevers and the Chicago Cardinals could do nothing with the forward wall of the Frankford Yellow Jackets today, but they took to the air in time to gain a 6-to-0 victory in a National pro football game.

The former Stanford ace and his mates battered away at the Frankford line for nearly three periods without accomplishing a thing. The Cards finally opened up with passes in the third period and Nevers tossed one to George Belden that was good for 45 yards and the only touchdown of the contest.

Friedman's Field Goal Beats Stapleton.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The New York Giants defeated Stapleton, 9 to 7, today to remain in the fight for the National Football League pennant.

Benny Friedman, famous Michigan star, won the game with less than a half minute to go when he kicked a field goal from the 32-yard line. Sedbrooke started the Giants off ahead in the first quarter with a touchdown. Two of Friedman's passes paved the way. In the third period, Ken Strong, former New York University ace, scored a touchdown and then booted the extra point to put the Stapes in the lead.

Frosty Peters Stars In Providence Win.

Providence, R. I., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—A drop kick from the 27-yard line in the third period enabled the Providence Steam Roller eleven to defeat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 3 to 0, here today in a National Professional Football League game.

Frosty Peters, former Illinois star, made the kick on his second attempt in the same period. The Roller threatened in the second, when they were held on the 4-yard line.

The Dodgers worked the ball to the 5-yard line in the fourth period, but the Roller took the ball away from them there.

Class Track Games At G. U. Thursday

The freshmen, sophomore, junior and senior classes of Georgetown University will compete in an intramural track meet Thursday afternoon on the new Hilltop Athletic Field. Members of the varsity track team who have competed in intercollegiate competition are not eligible to enter.

Eleven events make up the program. They are 50, 75 and 400 yard dashes; half and mile runs, quarter and half-mile relays, shotput, discus, javelin and high jump. John D. O'Reilly, varsity track coach and director of intramural sports, will supervise the meet.

Fordham Leads Pack With Six Victories to Credit.

NEW YORK, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Only five Eastern teams were left undefeated after the slaughter of this week's football warfare, and not one had succeeded in keeping its record clear of opponents' scoring. Two of the five, Dartmouth and Army, have been tied.

Utah Outclasses Field In Mountain Grid Race

Denver, Colo., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The point-a-minute pace set by Utah University in its dash toward a third consecutive Rocky Mountain Conference championship today stood in sharp contrast to the scoring efforts of the rapidly dwindling field of contenders.

Ike Armstrong's Utah Indians have won four straight games by topheavy scores for an average of 51 points a game.

The University of Colorado, sole remaining barrier in the Utes' path to the title, took its worst scare of the season in Colorado Springs, being barely able to squeeze through for a 14-to-13 victory over Colorado College. Colorado's performance dispelled any reasonable hope its supporters might have entertained for a victory over Utah at Boulder November 15. The Colorado line was vastly outplayed and the winners held their own only by a successful pass attack.

Utah Aggies, previously unbeaten in conference competition, bowed, as was expected, to Brigham Young, 39 to 14. This result left Utah and Colorado as the only undefeated eligibles for the championship, since Montana State, holding one victory and no defeat, has only three games on its schedule, two less than enough to warrant championship consideration. Wyoming, endeavoring to win its first conference game in three years, was held to a 6-6 tie by Colorado Teachers.

Tschirgi Is Grid Hero At Naval Academy

Annapolis, Md., Nov. 2.—The rejuvenation that the Navy Team showed in its overwhelming victory over Princeton was still apparent in its contest Saturday with West Virginia Wesleyan, although the latter had a star of the first caliber in Battles. Navy's second and third string were put in intact to play the latter stages of the game. Kirn, Navy's outstanding star, although fit to start, was withheld because of numerous minor bruises, it being considered advisable to save him for the Ohio State game Saturday. Tschirgi showed his rare form and gave promise of being one of the Navy's great backs.

He should be in great form next Saturday at the Baltimore Stadium. All other members of the team came through Saturday unscathed and are in fine fettle. The entire chamber of commerce of Columbus, Ohio, accompanied by a band of 120 pieces and 2,500 rooters, will leave Columbus Thursday night, arriving in Washington Friday, where they will spend the day, going to Baltimore that night and Saturday morning. Since the scoreless tie game between Ohio State and Wisconsin Saturday there is increased enthusiasm among the Ohio State followers and indications are that additional rooters will join the movement eastward.

APACHES CHEERED BY RETURN OF STAR

1927. Although he was the coach three years ago he returns only as one of the players, but he may act as an assistant to Jerry Carroll, who was appointed chieftain this season.

Rauber had just completed four years of football at Washington and Lee University, when he was signed as player-coach of the Apaches in 1927. He turned out a fighting team with a well organized attack and a sound defense, the like of which had never been known in local sandlot football history.

In the championship game with the Mohawks, Rauber bore the burden himself although he had ten ten mates more than eager individually to do it. He drop-kicked a field goal and an extra point and passed to Joe Sweeney for a touchdown.

In 1928, without Rauber in their ranks, the Apaches relinquished the championship to the Mohawks. Last year they regained it under the guidance of Bill Lytell, with whom Rauber played at Central High School about ten years ago.

Ben Franklin U. Will Play All-College Court Schedule

ALL-COLLEGE competition has been made the policy for the schedule-makers of Benjamin Franklin University's basket ball team, and the Accountants this winter will go through the hardest list of games ever arranged for them.

Heretofore, Benjamin Franklin has played independent, prep school and college basket ball teams, but it wishes hereafter to gain recognition in the collegiate class alone.

Games already scheduled for Coach Buck Debosky's five are: Catholic U., Gallaudet, Lynchburg, Mt. St. Mary's, Rider College, of Trenton, N. J., and University of Baltimore. Efforts are being made to schedule games with Roanoke and Hampden-Sidney.

Coach Debosky has scheduled the first practice for his men tonight in the Langley High School gymnasium. He expects about 35 candidates to report.

Rosedale Booters Upset Gaithersburg Team, 4-2

Northeast Soccerists' Victory One of Surprises of Season; British, Fashion Shop and Rockville Other Winners in League Play.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

ROSEDALE'S well-groomed soccer club pulled the big surprise of the local season yesterday when it handily defeated the league-leading Gaithersburg Team, of the Capital City League, 4 to 2. The Northeast lads displayed a superior brand of the kicking game from the opening whistle to the final to give the Maryland booters their first defeat of the season. And, to add insult to injury, Gaithersburg was playing at home.

British United and D. C. Kickers furnished 1,500 spectators on the Monument Grounds with one of the best exhibitions of the season in the only Washington Soccer League game. The Englishmen triumphed, 2 to 1, after one of the bitterest struggles of the year. The winning marker was recorded as the result of a penalty kick, deftly executed by Jack Watts, who was dr

BROOKLAND, QUENTIN, PETWORTH, COLUMBIA WIN OTHER CONTESTS

Brookland Ties Mercury for Unlimited Class Lead.

UNLIMITED SECTION.

Brooklands	2	0	1	5
Seat Pleasants	1	0	2	4
Marions	1	1	1	3
Quentins	1	2	1	3
St. Stephen's	0	2	2	2
Alpha Delta Omegas	0	2	2	2

By nosing out the Alpha Delta Omegas, of Alexandria, 7-6, Brookland took full advantage of its opportunity to deadlock the bye-drawing Mercurys for first place in the unlimited section of The Post's Capital City Football League yesterday afternoon in a fourth round league contest.

Seat Pleasant passed up a similar chance by being held to a 7-7 tie by St. Stephen's, and the Quentins removed the Marions from the list of unbeaten elevens, 6-0, in the remaining contests on the card.

In spite of the fact that the Alexandrians hung up 23 first downs to Brookland 3, the District outfit eked out the decision by virtue of a point after touchdown awarded on an offside penalty in a battle staged on the Silver Spring Field. The Virginians outplayed their opponents and kept the ball in Brookland territory most of the contest.

Brooklanders Shine On Defense.

The Brooklanders put up a superb defensive game to stop the hard-driving Alpha Deltas five out of the six times they pushed the pigskin within 3 yards of the Brookland goal. The Washingtonians lost no time in capitalizing on a lucky "break," which came their way in the second period when Grant blocked and recovered Williams' kick on the Virginians' 9-yard strip. Holden went over for the six-pointer on a line plunge, after Smith had lugged the oval for half a dozen yards.

Shapiro's 43-yard canter around end put the ball on Brookland's 12-yard mark midway in the third quarter. A penalty for holding advanced it to the 1-yard line, and Williams dived through center for the score. An attempted place-kick for the extra point by the same player was blocked.

The kicking and ball-carrying of H. Voorhees and Holden, together forward wall featured for Brookland, with the defensive play of the whole Goldman, Shapiro and Williams played the best football for the Fraters.

A penalty for off-side also cost Seat Pleasant a win over St. Stephen's in an engamenet played at Boyer Stadium, Seat Pleasant. After the Saints had come from behind to score a touchdown in the last few minutes of play, Zumbo's attempted conversion of the extra point by a place-kick went wide of the posts. The Churchmen were awarded the tying extra point, however, because several of the Maryland forwards charged before the ball was snapped on the play.

Scoring Opportunities Are Rare.

Scoring opportunities were are during the battle and the oval see-sawed between the 40-yard strips most of the contest. Each team capitalized on its lone chance to count. Aided by a 15-yard penalty for holding and a 5-yard one for off-side, Seat Pleasant marched from midmield to the Saints' 11-yard strip in the second period. Ratke then spun through the right tackle for the score and followed it up by plunging through the same place for the extra point.

St. Stephen's evened the count in the last 5 minutes of play when McMahon took a ppretty 20-yard pass from Zumbo and dashed 12 yards for touchdown.

Fitzgerald, Parrott and Warring were the outstanding players for the Saints, while the line play of Brown and Hodkinson, and the ball-toting of Cady and Ratke stood out for the suburbanities.

In defeating the Marions, 6-0, on the Gonzaga field the Quentins not only scored their first league triumph of the present campaign but also captured the unlimited championship of Southeast. The result was more or less of an upset as the Marions had been pregame favorites by a slight margin.

The Quents played inspired football to win. Holding the powerful Marion offensive proclivities in complete check most of the battle, the Orange-jersied performers punched across the lone touchdown of the fray in the closing minutes of the first half. A series of line bucks and short end runs which started the Marions' 42-yard strip, culminated when Suit smashed his way through center for the 6-pointer Jordan's line plunge for the extra point failed.

Outstanding in the Quentin victory were Parella, H. Lanham, Jordan, Eggleston and Suit. Licarione, Borden and Hoff were the Marion stars.

D. G. S. Eleven Loses After 3 Years as Raffo Stars.

THE Centennials yesterday afternoon handed the Palace-District Grocery Stores Eleven its first local defeat in three years by a 6-0 score in the feature game in the 150-pound section of the Capital City League, and thereby intrenched themselves more firmly in the top berth of that section, particularly as the Petworth Pennants beat the Del Rays, who previously had been deadlocked in second place with the Palaces.

In the third game on the day's schedule the Columbias beat the Wolverines, 26-6.

The premier Centennial forward pass duet, Foley and Raffo, staged their little act for the benefit of Palace-D. G. S. and 1,100 fans on the Gonzaga High School field. This pair contrived to score the only touchdown of the game late in the second quarter.

Grimm pounced on a Palace fumble on the Southwest team's 29-yard line to set the stage for Foley and Raffo. Bussink picked up a couple of yards at tackle and then Foley, on a fake end run, shot the ball 7 yards over the line of scrimmage to Raffo who twisted his way 17 yards for the six-pointer. The Palace forwards checked Foley's end run for the point-after-touchdown.

As the result of blocked kicks, the Southwesterns in the first quarter twice had possession of the ball inside their rivals' 12-yard mark. Both times the Cents stiffened to take the oval on downs. In the last period Palace smashed its way to the Centennials 11-yard line, but three passes and a line plunge failed to advance the pigskin.

The Cents muffed two other scoring chances. Fitzgerald covered a Palace fumble in the opening quarter 7 yards from the Southwest outfit's goal line, and another Foley to Raffo aerial act for 13 yards, coupled with a penalty, put the pigskin on the Palace-D. G. S. 6-yard line at the start of the second half. But a stout Southwest defense on each occasion broke up the threats.

Bussink, of the winners, was the standout player of the contest. His ball-carrying, tackling, passing and kicking harassed Palace the whole route. Fitzgerald, Foley and Raffo also took prominent parts in the Centennial victory. For Palace-D. G. S., Dearborn Divvers and the Healey brothers starred.

Special to The Washington Post.

Alexandria, Nov. 2.—Taking advantage of all openings, the Engine Company No. 5 football team of this city defeated the Skinker Bros. Eagles eleven, of Washington, here this afternoon, 13-0. The game was played before a large crowd on Haydons Field.

H. Scott's 45-yard dash for a touchdown in the first quarter gave the fans a real thrill. He easily outdistanced all tacklers. In the fourth quarter the Firefighters used an aerial attack to register. A 35-yard pass, Bennett to Ross, netted a score. Ross caught the leather on the Eagles' goal line.

Gainoly played best for the Washington lads, while Harrington was the outstanding defensive player for the locals.

SAILORS BOW TO CELTICS, 21 TO 0

Alexandria's Gridmen Outclass Seamen Gunners.

ALEXANDRIA, Nov. 2.—After a slow start this season the St. Mary's Celtic gridders established themselves as a real threat for independent football honors in this section when they gave the Seamen Gunners team, of Washington, a sound trouncing today, their first defeat of the campaign, 21—0.

Over 1,500 gridiron enthusiasts were on the side-lines to witness the encounter and they were well repaid as a fast and interesting game was dished out. The Gunners with Pierce and Bricker carrying the leather threatened the Celtics' goal-line in the opening minutes, but the threat was short lived as they lost the pigskin on downs.

The Celtics scored their first touchdown in the latter stages of the opening period when Cabell dusted around end for 15 yards to cross the Gobs' goal-line.

Houston Charges Over For Touchdown.

In the fourth quarter, Houston charged over from the Gunners' 5-yard line for a six-pointer, while the last score came after Colassanto intercepted a forward pass and rushed the leather to the Gunners' 4-yard line. After two line-plunges, that failed, Dick Allen made the score on a wide end run. M'Queeny tackled a Gob back behind his goal-line in the third set-to for the safety.

Bricker, Pierce and Henchman played a great offensive game for the Sailors. Time after time they tore off yardage only to lose the ball on downs. In the Celtics, forewall, Rube Hayman and Bill Padgett's work stood out. Bush's flashy work on end was also a feature.

Les McMenamin exhibited an educated toe and kept the leather in the Gobs' territory at the critical spots of the game. McMenamin's work in tossing passes to Allen and Bush was a feature.

Next Sunday the Celtics will oppose the Frederick Collegians in the feature attraction in Baggett's stadium.

DEPRESSION TESTS FASCISM TO LIMIT

Clamor for Work Is Proving Most Urgent Problem for Duce to Solve.

IS DUE TO POPULATION

Milan, Italy, Nov. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—The insistent demand for work by increasing thousands of Italian laborers is the most urgent problem confronting Benito Mussolini.

Il Duce and his colleagues have surmounted political difficulties, one after another, since the Black Shirt regime took over the government during a similar economic crisis. Through adroit political maneuvering, they have consolidated themselves by capitalizing the exigencies of the moment. They posed as having saved the industrialists of Italy from bolshevism, then they in turn undertook to save the workers from becoming vassals of capitalism.

Political expedience and artificial emotionalism, however, are not factors helping the Italians at the moment. Fascism's immediate future now depends upon how squarely it faces unromantic economic realities.

Real Depression Felt.

The depression is even more pressing upon Italy than on some of her continental neighbors. The Italian worker has become satiated with patriotic speeches and jingoism, which do not satisfy the gnawing beneath his belt. Jobs are mighty scarce.

France is the only country in Europe where jobs are still comparatively easy to find, and despite police and militia cordons around every pass, thousands of Italians have braved the dangers of illegal passage to reach the "land of plenty—of work."

Overproduction is perhaps the most immediate cause of Italy's distress. The natural increase in population is between 400,000 and 500,000 yearly. Exploiting the virility of Italy's people has been one of the cardinal tenets of fascism.

A few years ago, Mussolini announced that this fecundity was among the nation's greatest assets. Men, as well as cattle, could be raised for export. But the exporting of men, particularly in accordance with Fascist principles whereby they would be a continual source of wealth to the motherland by sending back their savings, is proving difficult.

Since the United States closed its gates to unrestricted Italian immigration, the Fascists have sought to control the departure of all workers from the country. Visas and passports are granted only after Fascist officials have satisfied themselves that the emigrant is leaving behind unbreakable ties which bind him to Italy. Dependent families, property or proof of unadulterated allegiance to Fascism are some of the qualifications exacted.

Agricultural sections, particularly the Valley of the Po, have added their quota to the unemployment problem. In an effort to alleviate the situation the agricultural unions and the Federation of Agricultural Employers in the Province of Mantua have recently agreed that any employer hiring more than the minimum number of workers required by law is permitted to lower the wages of his permanent employes from 10 to 30 per cent, according to the number of extra men he engages.

Relief Only Temporary.

Obviously, the relief thus furnished is temporary, but it conforms to the policy in northern Italian industrial centers, where factories have reduced working hours or days. In this way a minimum wage of 42 lire (about $2.10) a week keeps many out of the ranks of the unemployed.

Official figures show unemployment during July was 70 per cent greater than in the same period last year. At the beginning of August, 366,270 unemployed were officially registered.

Today, every lire raised by taxation is going into the most productive channels. It is true that 6,000 men have just been put to work on aviation development by the air ministry, but the results of their labor can be capitalized in peace time as well as in war.

Banana Oil Used To Warn Miners

Acrid Fumes Are Heeded for Offensive Odor, Experts Find.

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The acrid fumes of banana oil, shot through ventilation fines at nearly a mile a minute, will be used to warn miners of peril in American ore borings, the American Standards Association announced here today. Tests of signalling methods by experts in the United States Bureau of Mines has shown that workers recoil from offensive odors more quickly than they head other warnings, the announcement said.

Mines which comply with the provisions of the American Standard code for fire-fighting approved the new method, the association's report said, after its submission by the National Fire Protection Association and the American Mining Congress, acting for the Government investigators.

Chemicals producing disagreeable but harmless odors will be employed, such as mercaptan, ethyl mercaptan, rancid butter fumes and the banana distillation, amyl acetate.

Death Claims Father Of Kingsford-Smith

Sydney, N. S. W., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The death of William Kingsford-Smith, father of Charles Kingsford-Smith, conqueror of both the Pacific and Atlantic Oceans, was announced today.

The famous flier's father was confined to his bed after the excitement and strain incident to Kingsford-Smith's flight across the Atlantic last summer. He rallied for a time after the flight, however. Kingsford-Smith recently completed a flight from England to Australia. Mr. Kingsford-Smith requested his ashes be scattered on the waters of the Pacific Ocean. Friends say his famous son would probably perform the sad duty.

CLAIRVOYANTS

CLAIRVOYANT THE MAN WHO KNOWS
608 12th St. N.W.
Over Woolworth's
5c & 10c Store

This strange man sees the way and tells it all. Just what your life has been. Just what it will be. Tells you when and whom you will marry, whether husband, wife or sweetheart is true or false. Tells of lodge changes, travel, just or absent friends, divorces, wills, deeds; whether it is best to buy or sell. He tells the good and the bad. A visit will convince you of his wonderful power.

Something tells you this is the man. You feel the impulse to call. Do not delay.

DETROIT CONDUCTS AUTO EXPERIMENT BY 30-MILE LIMIT

Liberal Ordinance Intended to Be Psychological Test for Drivers.

JUDGMENT IS STRESSED AND NOT SLOW TRAVEL

Arrested Speeders May Gain Freedom by Proving They Did Not Imperil Life.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 2.—Can the city dispense with automobile speed regulations as several States have done?

Does the imposition of an arbitrary maximum speed limit imply to the average driver that all speeds up to that limit are safe?

Has the time arrived when the motor car operator can be and must be taught that sound individual judgment is worth more than all the speed regulations ever devised from the standpoint of safety?

To these three questions, dealing with the most interesting aspect of modern traffic regulation, Detroit, Mich., is seeking an answer. Detroit has not abolished a maximum speed limit altogether. In a new motor vehicle ordinance, however, the Nation's motor capital has gone to the liberal blanket limit of 30 miles an hour.

Introduction of Psychology.

Even the 30-mile limit does not represent the full flare of the law's liberality. While arrest of offenders exceeding this limit is mandatory, the accused is given every chance in court to prove that his speed, whatever it may have been, endangered neither life nor property. If he is able to do so, he will be released without further ado. Conviction is not mandatory for merely exceeding the limit.

There is no assumption in the provisions of the new ordinance that speeds up to 30 miles an hour are safe nor that those above that are unsafe. It is recognized that no reasonable speed can be arbitrarily advanced as safe under varying conditions. Motor vehicle and traffic authorities and psychologists think motorists should be taught this finally and unforgettably. To them the Detroit venture holds promise of being the long-sought proper teaching method.

How is it going to achieve this end? Simply by setting the maximum limit high enough that it will be clear to all drivers it merely is an arbitrary figure having little bearing upon safe speeds.

Reactions of Motorist.

As the psychologist views it, it will work out in this way: While the motorist will know that the city has a blanket 30-mile speed limit, he will also know that under many circumstances he can not drive at 15 miles an hour. Further, he will realize that if he does drive at half the legal speed under certain conditions he is liable to arrest for recklessness. Putting these two together, he will make the logical deduction that, after all, the arbitrary speed limit means very little as compared with intelligent judgment.

Contributing to the general interest in the Detroit venture is the manner in which it ties into the subject of mental tests for drivers.

Officials have called in the psychologist to see if he can devise a means of measuring drivers' minds or intelligence. Together they hope it may be possible to evolve a yardstick that the State may apply to those of its citizens who ask the privilege of driving motor cars.

Typical of Questions.

Some of the questions tentatively proposed, particularly those relating to speed, are interesting.

Here is a typical one, chosen at random from among several tests which now are being used in the selection of professional drivers and which probably will form the basis of those developed for all motorists:

"Would you feel safe in driving considerably above the legal speed limit on a fairly wide street at 2 o'clock in the morning if you knew there was no motorcycle policeman in the vicinity?"

The question is designed to test a driver's judgment, not his honesty. The conditions would seem to dictate an affirmative answer. However, the psychologist who asks the question declares it calls for a negative answer if it is to indicate good judgment.

His reasoning is that the driver must assume that the motorist approaching on any side street will accept the superficial signs of safety. Accordingly, the latter will be driving fast. If the first operator also is going fast, any resulting mishap is bound to be serious. Hospital records fully bear this out. They show the most serious accidents happen during the periods when congestion is least and speed highest.

613 of Washington Get Vote Decision

Held Eligible to Ballot Tomorrow at North Beach, Chesapeake Beach.

Citing a decision of the Appelate Court handed down Friday, the Democratic central committee of Calvert County, Md., yesterday announced that 613 Washingtonians are eligible to vote tomorrow in North Beach and Chesapeake Beach, Md.

Of the 109 Democrats challenged by the Republicans on the last revision day, the committee says only 55 were stricken from the lists for not having filed a declaration of intention to become a resident of the State, as required by the State constitution.

In upholding the right of 613 Democrats to vote in the two towns, the court is understood to have ruled that the election law of 1929 was unconstitutional in that it eliminated the necessity for filing a declaration of intention to reside in the State, a requirement that is contained in the State constitution.

Dr. Richmond took occasion to denounce what he termed American imperialism; also the conditions prevailing in certain parts of the United States, notably Philadelphia, which he called "the most rotten city this side of hell."

Julius Davidson, traveler, said American imperialism had caused misunderstandings and animosity in Latin America and that considerable anti-American sentiment prevails in the Latin republics.

Police Round Up Italians in Paris

Raiders Seek to Break Up Anti-Fascist Activity by Arrest of 109.

Paris, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—One hundred and nine Italians were caught here today in a police dragnet, thrown over five wards, in an attempt to break up the Italian anti-Fascist organization. Fifty-four of the prisoners later were released.

Police raided lodging houses and cheap hotels, demanding the identification papers of more than 1,000 individuals. Many were found already facing decrees of expulsion. Others had criminal records and will be deported to Italy.

The public regarded the raids as the start of a great police drive against the anti-Fascists, of whose Paris activities the Mussolini government has been complaining for years. The attempted killing of Luis Carti last Wednesday by anti-Fascists, who considered him a renegade, was believed the immediate occasion for the police action.

The authorities said they had found proof of a vast militant anti-Fascist organization in the city.

G. W. U. PRESIDENT FAVORS DRIVE FOR IMMEDIATE BUYING

Buy-Now Campaign Declared Both Timely and Sound by Dr. Marvin.

SPEAKING COMMITTEE IS NAMED FOR WORK

George A. G. Wood Chairman of Group to Outline Plan on Radio.

Endorsement of the buy now for better business campaign was given last night by Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University. Announcement was also made of the speaking committee which will carry the buy now drive to clubs, organizations and citizens associations, and to the people in general this week over the radio.

This committee is composed of George A. G. Wood, chairman; Charles W. Darr, former president of the Washington Chamber of Commerce; Dr. George C. Havenner, recently re-elected president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; George E. Keneipp, Mark Lansburg, president of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association; Thomas P. Littlepage, George Plitt, president of the Board of Trade, and Nicholas Whelan, publisher of the Times and Herald.

Response Should Be Positive.

The committee of speakers will work in conjunction with the city-wide buy now committee. In endorsing the campaign, Dr. Marvin had the following to say:

"The aim of applied economics is to attain an equation of supply and demand which will enable us to increase wages and profits while decreasing prices paid by the consumer, and thus raise still higher the living standards of our country. The importance of such consideration is emphasized in periods of depression. Our response, however, should be positive rather than negative. We should remember that if economic science has not banished business depressions, nevertheless it has aided greatly in minimizing the harmful effects and ni pointing the way to future business stabilization.

Sound and Timely.

"The admonition that we buy now for better business impresses me as both sound and timely. While all buying should be kept within the limits prescribed by thrift and by our incomes, we should not fail to take advantage of present low paices.

"If you buy now you will have the added satisfaction of knowing that you are aiding materially in bringing back to normal standards the number of business transactions and the volume of employment."

Communion to Be Held At Meeting Tomorrow

Bishop James E. Freeman will offer Holy Communion at the anual meeting of the missionary institute of the diocese to be held tomorrow at the Church of the Epiphany, on G street near Fourteenth street northwest. He will be assisted by Dr. J. B. Phillips, rector of the church.

Dr. George B. Gilbert, of Middletown, Conn., will discuss methods for the development of rural church work. He will be followed by Dr. Robert W. Patton, who will speak on the needs of the American Church Institute for Negroes.

Kidnaping Charged To Man by Wife, 15

Girl Says She Was Bought for Mules and Wagon, Then Abducted.

Hopkinsville, Ky., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Ed Green was in jail here today on a warrant sworn out by his wife, Louise, 15, charging him with kidnaping her at the point of a pistol.

Mrs. Green, who said she left her husband while they were living in Detroit last year after she found out that he had "bought her for a team of mules and wagon, harness thrown in," told county authorities that Green came to the home of her father, Henry Gibbs and abducted her.

Louise became known in western Kentucky as the "mule bride" after the alleged trade between her father and Green. A feud was said to have developed between the Gibbses and Greens when Louise refused to live with her husband.

$132 for Death of Cow; Nails in Feed, Charged

Martinsburg, W. Va., Nov. 2.—Damages in the sum of $132 were awarded Albert Johnson against Vitality Mills, Inc., on his suit charging the death of a cow was due to horseshoe nails, bits of wire and pieces of iron in food purchased from the Vitality Mills.

Johnson claims he found foreign material in the feed, and dissection of the cow also showed foreign substances. The company failed to accept responsibility, he said, and he had a car of feed at a county point attached, the company then giving bond. The decision, given in a magistrate's court, was appealed.

Cannon Described As in "Severe Pain"

Condition Still Serious, No Danger Now, His Physician Says.

(Associated Press.)

Dr. R. Lyman Sexton said yesterday that the condition of Bishop James Cannon, jr., remained serious, but there was no immediate danger.

He declared the inflammatory arthritis which sent the Southern Methodist churchman to Sibley Hospital had been checked during the day, but there was no change otherwise.

The arthritis was said by Dr. Sexton to have spread previously to both arms and legs and above the right knee. The bishop was described as in "severe pain."

LOURDES DEVOTIONS FEATURE SERVICES AT CATHOLIC HOUR

Very Rev. Ignatius Smith Speaks on "Souls" Over Radio.

FRIARS AND SANCTUARY BOYS HOLD PROCESSION

60 High School Girls Garbed in White Also Are Participants.

Special Lourdes devotions and the blessing of the sick were held yesterday in the Immaculate Conception Church as the Very Rev. Ignatius Smith, O. P., noted Dominican preacher, delivered the first of his November sermons during the Washington Catholic radio hour, which is broadcast from the church.

Father Smith devoted his sermon to "Souls." "Today," he said, 'the 2d of November, is dedicated by our Catholic Church to the souls of the faithful departed, hence, since this is Sunday, the official recognition of the day will be held tomorrow. Within 24 hours, 300,000,000 Catholics throughout the world will be joined by millions of non-Catholics in devotions to the souls of the departed in purgatory.

Soul to Live Forever.

"Reason and revelation tell us that your soul will live forever some place.

"Reason and revelation tell us that the souls of those who die at enmity with God in the depth of their unrepented sins will go to the punishment that is called hell.

"Reason tells us that they who die without sin and without a debt of punishment due to sin go at once to Heaven."

Lourdes Procession Held.

The services were also marked by the solemn Lourdes procession in which 26 friars of the Atonement, sanctuary boys in blue and white cassocks, and over 60 high school girls, in white, participated.

During the blessing of the sick, under the direction of the Rev. Francis J. Hurney, pastor, a staff of nurses, aided by Dr. Charles Koones, took part.

Father Smith's sermon next Sunday will be "Believers."

CURB SHARES DROP; NEW LOWS APPEAR

Anglo-Chilean Nitrate Loses Three-Point Advance as Week Concludes.

INSULL UTILITIES SINKS

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Unable to hold a small technical rally, the curb market has declined to around the year's low levels. Trading on the latest decline, which started at the middle of last week, was very slow, for the bears were cautious and long purchasers extremely hesitant.

The market was a trading affair throughout the week. Price movements narrowed substantially in the later sessions, but they had been almost equally meager on the early upturn. Sharp defiation in four or five high-priced specialties seemed to have been at least temporarily arrested. Utilities sagged toward the week-end under moderate pressure which sent Electric Bond & Share to within a fraction of the year's low. Oils were disturbed by further cuts in crude and gasoline prices. Standard of Indiana and Gulf, among the leaders of the group, sagged to new lows.

The investment trusts, which have been deflated to such an extent that many are selling below their liquidating value, were mostly steady, although Insull Utilities investments and Continental Shares convertible preferred dropped about 5 points each.

The market for the curb's industrials remain thin. Glen Alden Coal, which is paying dividends at the annual rate of $8 a share against $10 recently, lost 9 points. The next dividend meeting comes on December 10. Angio-Chilean Nitrate moved against the general trend with a rise of about three points, but later lost its advance. Crocker Wheeler was heavy.

In the matter of volume comparisons were in order with the same week of 1929, when the market was in the throes of violent liquidation. On October 29 of last year sales exceeded 7,000,000 shares; only a small fraction of that total changed hands on the first anniversary of the record day.

Friends to Attend Ceremony for Ace

Two May Fly Across Country to See Rickenbacker Get Medal.

When Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker is decorated with the Congressional Medal of Hoonr by President Hoover at Bolling Field Thursday afternoon, a number of his associates in the Ninety-fourth Aero Squadron of the A. E. F. will be on hand to make the ceremony more pleasing to the American ace of aces.

Maj. Gen. James F. Fechet, chief of the Army Air Corps, has issued invitations to all members of the Ninety-fourth Aero Squadron to attend the ceremony. Many of them plan to come. A few are now living in distant corners of the earth. Maj. Carl Spatz and Capt. Frank O'D. Hunter, of the Air Corps, now on duty at Rockwell Field, Calif., in all probability will fly across the continent to see this belated honor bestowed upon the former commander of the Ninety-fourth Squadron.

Capt. Rickenbacker, who holds a commission as colonel in the Specialist Reserve, is credited with having brought down 25 enemy planes during the World War. In one combat he brought down a single-seater Fokker and a two-seater photographic plane before opening his throttle wide and running away from four additional Fokkers and a second two-seater.

WEAKNESS RULES CHANGES IN STOCKS

Past Week's Trend, Despite Few Rallies, Continues to Move Down.

INDEX OFF 4½ POINTS

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The stock market concluded a month of sagging prices, and incidentally observed the anniversary of the grand smash of 1929 with a wan and feeble performance last week.

Trading was in the lightest volume since the third week of September, and the action of the share market seemed largely to reflect the vicissitudes of Wall streets rather leaden spirits, while the bond and leading commodity markets held more even keel.

The quarterly reports of two leading steel companies and one leading motor manufacturer appeared during the week, and pending their publication the stock market was uncertain of itself. Furthermore, with a national election next Tuesday the market displayed its traditional pre-election hesitancy.

Industrials at New Low.

During the first two days of the week the list showed faint signs of resuming the rally from the low levels reached on October 22, but during the next three days it sank steadily. The price index of 90 leading shares was carried within a fraction of the low of the previous week, and the index of 50 industrials alone actually broke to the lowest point since August, 1927.

Short covering at the end of week caused a slight rally and the price index of 90 shares showed a net loss for the week of about 4½ points. The net loss for the month of October amounted to approximately 13 points, indicating a shrinkage of about 9 per cent in quoted values.

The most encouraging aspect of the week's trading was apparent cessation of necessitous liquidation. The inability of the market to make any decided technical rebound after the almost steady decline of seven weeks, however, has been an abnormal and somewhat disconcerting aspect of the situation, and has obscured the market's technical position.

Earnings Statesments Out.

The three outstanding earnings statements were not far from Wall street expectations. U. S. Steel, with net of $2.06 a common share for the quarter, was at first glance more favorable than expected, but eliminating nonoperating profit, net was only $1.78, or 3 cents above the dividend requirement. Bethlehem, with 53 cents a share, or less than half the dividend of $1.50, was about as expected. General Motors earned 53 cents, or 22 cents less than the quarterly dividend, but some quarters had looked for a less favorable showing.

Brokers' loans declined another $101,000,000, which makes a deflation of about $700,000,000 in five weeks, carrying the total to $2,512,000,000, or only 37 per cent of the total of little more than a year ago. Call money held at 2 per cent, with outside offerings at 1. Although there has been extensive shifting of security loans from brokerage accounts to the New York banks, the New York Federal Reserve Bank, in its monthly report commented upon the extraordinary strong position of these institutions, finding them in a position to meet any credit demands that may arise.

Labor Party Loses In English Voting

Municipal Elections Cut No Fewer Than 65 Seats From Total.

London, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Final returns from the municipal election in about 80 of the largest cities and towns in England and Wales show the Labor party lost no fewer than 92 seats and gained only 37 in the recent voting.

The Conservatives gained 79 and lost 10, while the Liberals gained 9 and lost 17. The Independents gained 24 and lost 20.

While municipal and parliamentary politics in Great Britain proceed on greatly different lines, and experts disagree as to what extent municipal elections can be considered representative of national political feeling, it was generally agreed that the results were remarkable. They were also unexpected in view of the fact that in the last municipal elections Labor gained 112 seats and lost only 12.

Australian Gold Output Shrinks.

Sydney, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The output of gold in Australia in five years has fallen from $15,720,000 to $9,000,000. Ten years ago the value was $27,375,000.

GAIN OF U. S. BONDS FEATURE OF WEEK

Several of Group's Issues Rise to New Peaks for Three-Year Period.

LATIN-AMERICANS SCORE

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Contrasted with the unstable conditions that have prevailed virtually since fall arrived, bond prices were firmer last week, but activity still suffered by compariaon with the period when liquidation was in full swing.

For the greater part of the week, domestic railroad and utility issues ignored the influence of the stock market and crept upward but industrial corporations bonds remained in the doldrums, except for a few obligations. Far more conspicuous was the United States Government list, which was well supported throughout the weeks of sagging and was considerably strengthened by the inquiry from banks throughout the week. Several issues climbed to new highs for 1930, reaching a peak higher than any attained in three years.

Foreign Section Strong.

Signs of greater stability in Brazil and encouraging news of a diverse character from some other foreign countries put new vitality into the foreign market, and the widest gains of the week were in that section of the stock exchange list. Substantial recoveries have been made by Latin American and German bonds from their lows reached several weeks ago.

Many of the South American issues have recovered the largest portion of the losses suffered in the swift declines, and some are within a few points of the mid-September prices just before the decline set in. Peru 8s of 1960, Peru 7s of 1959, Chile 6s of 1961 and 1963, Bolivian 7s of 1969 and the 8s of 1969, Brazilian 8s, 7½s and 6½s, which dipped as much as 30 points in some instances have come back strongly.

Germans Regain Losses.

The German list moved spasmodically, but regained part of the ground lost in the selling. German 7s, which sagged 5 points to 100¼, sold at the end of the week around 103, and German International 5½s, down 9 points to 73½ a short time ago, sold as high as 80. German municipals and industrials moved irregularly higher.

While not entirely divorced from the influence of the share market, bonds were steadier as a whole on days when share prices were reactionary than they have been in recent weeks. It is generally accepted that the principal cause of the setback in bond prices this fall has been due to liquidation by speculators to protect their stock market accounts, with the break in foreign bonds as an additional factor.

Uncertainty over the trend of bond prices virtually stopped public offering of new issues last week, the total of $17,643,000, half of which was in municipal bonds, was the smallest of the year with but one exception.

Thirsty Fish in Closed Cafe Aided by Police

Santa Barbara, Calif., Nov. 2.—Sheriff James Roes and even the City of Santa Barbara are liable to arrest for cruelty to animals or fish. It is like this:

A flock of gold fish in the Gold Fish Cafe have been without fresh water for several weeks, the reason being that the restaurant was closed through bankruptcy proceedings. The sheriff closed the place and the city turned off the water.

A humane citizen protested to the police, who obtained the key from the sheriff, then walked a block to get fresh water for the thirsty fish.

Cuban Elections Remain in Doubt

Three More Days Required to Complete Count of Ballots.

Havana, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The counting of ballots cast in yesterday's congressional elections continued today, but officials believed three more days would be needed to complete the official tally.

The department of the interior stated that probably 60 per cent of all the eligible voters went to the polls, but antigovernment factions placed the figure at less than one-fourth that. Conservative observers generally believed it was about 30 per cent. The light vote was blamed on lack of party organization. In Havana eight polling places did not open.

RETAIL TRADE HOLDS TO IMPROVED TREND

Oil, Steel and Automobile Industries, However, Still Mark Time.

GRAIN MARKET STABLE

New York, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—The industrial and trade news of the past week, marking the close of October, normally the peak month of autumn, adhered in the main to the cheerless tenor of preceding weeks, but was not wholly without encouraging aspects.

Heavy industries such as steel were inclined to recede further, but retail trade was well maintained at its recent volume; commodity price trends were mixed, but inclined to stiffen, and new projects to increase employment continued to multiply. A nation-wide survey by the Associated Press indicated that recently announced programs for both public and private projects to put idle hands to work involve, in the aggregate, the application of about $1,000,000,000.

The grain markets, in particular, showed considerable stability. The Annalist's weekly commodity price index showed a gain of 8-10 of 1 point, having ranged between 121 and 122 for the past four weeks. The week's advances were recorded in farm products and textiles, but were partly offset by declines in fuels and metals. A fresh reaction in the stock market was perhaps a little unsettling.

Steel Ingot Output Drops.

In the steel industry, ingot output continued to shrink, from Age estimated production last week at 50 per cent of capacity against 53 a week previously. E. G. Grace, president of Bethlehem, in commenting on the corporation's third quarter report, showing net of only 63 cents a share, said improvement was not yet in sight. The industry generally, however, looks for a normal upturn after the first of the year. Executives who believed the bottom had been touched in the third quarter, however, have been forced to revise their opinions.

Freight car loadings for the week ended October 18 again declined. There is usually a seasonal slump after the middle of October, but it is possible it has come a little earlier this year. The improvement in building contracts let during the first three weeks of October was not maintained in the latest week, when the aggregate for the States East of the Rockies, as reported by F. W. Dodge Corporation, was the lowest since August.

Auto Industry Marking Time.

The automobile industry continued to mark time, with the rate of operations for the past week reported as the lowest since last January. Some plants, particularly body makers, however, are calling back workers to go into production on new models to be introduced in January. There has been considerable gossip about lower prices for the 1931 models. With few exceptions the dealer situation is reported as satisfactory, although there has been a little piling up of used cars.

Several miscellaneous manufacturers were reported as more active, including makers of radio sets. The textile industry also seemed to be holding its recent gains. Stove and washing machine manufacturers were reported as more active. The shoe trade, however, continued quiet, and hide prices eased.

In nonferrous metals copper was generally down to 9½ cents a pound, the lowest in more than 30 years. The arrival in New York of two executives of the Katanga Mine in the Belgian Congo, however, left to reports that a world-wide curtailment program was being planned. The oil situation failed to improve, with crude prices displaying little stability.

Chicago Gang War Claims Two More

Victims Had Long Records, Police Say, in Field of Bootlegging.

Chicago, Nov. 2 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Two minor gangsters were shot to death here early this morning. William Sierra and Frank Smulo, alias Strak. Both had long police records in the field of hijacking and bootlegging.

Peter Maniak, a neighbor, heard shots at 5 a. m. but did not investigate them. While waiting on customers in his candy store at 9 a. m., he looked up and was horrified to see a blotch of crimson on the ceiling.

Police found Sierra dead, with four bullets in his body. Smulo, partly dressed, had reached the door in an apparent effort to escape but was shot dead on the threshold.

No clews to the killers were found. The theory is that both men were slain by a man or men they knew, since Maniak heard no call for help.

Bulgarians Hail Boris and Bride

Between 60,000, 70,000 Pay Homage as Couple Returns to Sofia.

Sofia, Nov. 2 (A.P.).—King Boris of Bulgaria and his queen-bride today received the homage of 60,000 to 70,000 of their subjects, who marched past the palace while the monarchs stood on a balcony.

Villagers, cabinet members and deputies participated in the reception. The pageant continued until the fatigue of Queen Giovanna became evident, whereupon police halted the parade. King Boris then invited to lunch the ministers and some of the deputies.

Premier Liaptcheff welcomed the monarch home after his honeymoon. He said the marriage constituted a very important event for Bulgaria.

An announcement said the king and queen probably would leave Sofia tonight for Vrana, 15 miles distant, and thence go tomorrow to Buxhograd for a vacation.

Mary Garden Has Tea With Her Former Critic

Amarillo, Tex., Nov. 2 (A.P.).—Mary Garden had tea today with Gene Howe, Amarillo editor who severely criticized her singing last year, a truce was effected. They parted company on the best of terms. The editor had said she was "so old she teetered" and Diva had retorted that Howe needed to learn something of opera. Today, Miss Garden said Howe was "a charming fellow."

The singer, who came to Amarillo at the invitation of business men seeking to reestablish Amarillo in her good graces, said she would give her "best" in her Amarillo concert tomorrow night.
